

Macdonald Minister of Finance

OTTAWA (CP)—Donald Macdonald, outspoken minister of energy since 1972, became Canada's new minister of finance today as Prime Minister Trudeau shuffled his cabinet in the wake of John Turner's resignation 15 days ago.

Macdonald, who recently talked of quitting politics for personal reasons, takes over the cabinet hot seat after Turner quit the ministry, with little explanation other than he wanted to return to private life.

The 43-year-old Toronto lawyer will be replaced in the tough energy portfolio by Alastair Gillespie, previously the minister of industry, trade and commerce.

And Don Jamieson, the Newfoundland who has been minister of regional economic expansion since 1972, will replace Gillespie.

Otto Lang, the Saskatchewan law teacher who has been justice minister, becomes minister of transport while maintaining responsibility for the Canadian Wheat Board.

He will be replaced by Ron Basford, who is moving up the cabinet ladder again after a 1972 shuffle which saw him go to the relatively minor portfolio of national revenue from the touchy urban affairs portfolio.

Alvin Jean Marchand, transport minister since 1972, remains in the cabinet, but without a special portfolio.

Bad Cullen, MP for Lambton-Sarnia since 1968, is promoted into the cabinet as minister of national revenue, replacing Basford.

The new minister for regional economic expansion is Marcel Lessard from Quebec's Lac-Saint-Jean riding. He was first elected to Parliament in 1962 as a Social Credit MP.

Lessard, 39, who has been parliamentary secretary to the minister of agriculture, was defeated in 1965 when he ran as an Independent Liberal, but was elected as a Liberal in 1968.

Although it had been strongly rumored in recent weeks that several other ministers, including Public Works Minister C. M. Drury and House leader Mitchell Sharp, would be leaving the cabinet information now suggests they will remain at least until next summer.

Forces' Brass Gets 13% Hike

Annual average pay increases of 13.8 per cent for commissioned ranks in the armed forces were announced today by Defence Minister James Richardson, according to a defence department spokesman in Victoria.

Effective Oct. 1, the 13.8 per cent increase is for officers of the rank of colonel and below. Non-commissioned ranks were given a 14.4 per cent increase.

Hikes are comparable, he said, to those granted to groups in the Public Service Commission. Pay for the forces since 1971 has been linked to that of similar occupations in the public services.

The Victoria spokesman gave the following examples of typical salaries in the forces: a private untrained recruit from $400 a month to $450; corporal radar technician with four years experience, $1,026 a month to $1,195; warrants officer, administrative clerk, from $1,137 to $1,317 a month; and captain in logistics with six years' rank, from $1,495 to $1,715 a month.

Increases for officers of general rank in the armed

BOND ISSUE

A new $50 million B.C. Hydro bond issue carrying 10 per cent interest has been approved by cabinet.

The official sale date is Oct. 15 and the 25-year issue will be available through normal investment channels.

The bonds, guaranteed by the B.C. government, will be sold in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 and $25,000.

Propane Mediation Under Way

NANAIMO — Mediation efforts toward settling a dispute which has left the city with out domestic gas began this morning in Vancouver following the appointment Thursday night of Peter Dowding.

The labor department mediation officer was named by deputy minister James Matkin, who is attending a departmental seminar in Trail. His action follows an urgent request by Mayor Frank Ney and city council, who also would like propane and butane supplies resumed while mediation proceeds.

Three Teamsters Union locals are in dispute with Transport Labor Relations, bargaining agent for five companies that supply liquefied gas on Vancouver Island. Ney has emergency feeding and evacuation plans ready for elderly persons who rely on gas for heating and cooking. Some have already been accommodated elsewhere, but the mayor and council are concerned that a drop in temperatures may bring hardship to others.

Council is prepared to declare Nanaimo a disaster area if necessary to restore tanker shipments of propane and butane.

Pickets Up to Save Logs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking pulp and paper workers have agreed to lift their picket lines temporarily to allow the freeing of close to five million board feet of submerged logs which are threatened by teredos, a voracious sea worm.

The logs are resting in a booming ground at Andy's Bay near Gambier Island, 40 miles north of Vancouver.

They are in an unsorted state with many of them jammed together underwater in a condition known as "jack-pot".

The British Columbia Labor

Relations Board Thursday, while upholding the legality of the picket line, urged the pulp workers to permit the logs to be freed. Otherwise, said the board, they would be subject to attack by the sea worms and a part of the province's wealth would be lost.

Ray McPhedran, president of the Canadian Paperworkers' Union Port Mellon local, said the union will lift its line today "to get the logs all floating."

He said temporary picket passes would be issued to a small crew of International Woodworkers of America members to free the logs during the next few days.

Meanwhile, talks between the International Wood-workers of America and B.C.'s forest companies continued in Victoria today.

IWA leader Jack Munro said the initial meeting Thursday was focused on the feasibility of continuing the negotiations.

"We're certainly not going to abandon the talks such as the pulp leaders did," Munro said.

The two B.C. pulp unions broke off talks Tuesday after industry negotiations turned down their major demands.

Munro said face-to-face meetings will continue Monday.

He said the IWA had presented a position to the industry negotiators, but would not reveal its contents.

Binding Arbitration Averts Police Strike

A threatened strike by Victoria police officers was averted late Thursday night when both sides agreed that the contract dispute be submitted to binding arbitration.

Earlier in the evening, the Victoria police union had voted 85-1 to serve 72-hour strike notice — the first strike vote in the union's history.

Union spokesman Dermot Owen-Flood said a further meeting was held after the strike vote with the union, police board and city council all agreeing to ask Labor Minister Bill King to appoint a single arbitrator.

The sequence of events leading up to the late-night agreement on arbitration began with an in-camera meeting of city council Thursday afternoon, following the regular council meeting.

Afterwards, Pollen would only tell reporters that he had been authorized to meet with the police board — the meeting would likely not be held until this morning — and then convey from the board to the union a proposal which "hopefully" would resolve the impasse.

But events apparently moved more swiftly than the mayor had indicated.

Police board member Jack Cowan, the lawyer who heads the board's negotiating committee, said today Pollen contacted him Thursday evening (before the scheduled union membership meeting) and informed him "council was prepared to go along with" arbitration.

This information was passed on to union representatives before they went into the meeting, Cowan said, but the only issue was the form that arbitration would take.

He had made known council's preference for some form of arbitration agreed by the parties and not involving an appointment by the labor minister, but this was unacceptable to the police union.

Cowan said the membership meeting apparently agreed to binding arbitration "with a strike as the alternative if we could not agree to the form that arbitration should take."

Union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said after the meeting that while such agreement in writing was reached within 18 hours, a strike would take place.

"But after we discussed it further we agreed on a single arbitrator," Cowan added.

Ald. Mike Young commented today that both sides in the dispute had only two alternatives, and fortunately "one of those two happened to be mutually acceptable."

Pollen had expressed his dislike of government-appointed arbitration at a police board meeting Wednesday.

He was not available for comment today.

Meanwhile, in the city's other dispute involving its firefighters, union and city spokesmen said Thursday they have learned that Labor Minister King has appointed

MILLIONAIRE JAIL PROBLEM

TORONTO (CP) — The 10,000 prisoners in Canada's federal prisons have been instructed not to keep Olympic or provincial lottery tickets inside prison walls, the federal penitentiary service says.

A directive circulated to 27 federal prisons across the country says that prisoners holding such tickets must mail them to relatives, friends or other parties.

Gregoire Surprenant, director of the penitentiary service secretariat, said in an interview from Ottawa Thursday that the order arose from a number of security and administrative considerations.

"It's not the losers we'd be concerned about, but having an inmate win a million dollars could create a hell of a lot of problems," he said. "Who knows what effect the sudden possession of all that money would have?"

He added that prison authorities do not want the responsibility of keeping tickets on behalf of prisoners.

Saudis Demand New Oil Freeze

Times News Services

VIENNA — Saudi Arabia today demanded a freeze on oil prices until Jan. 1, provoking bitter opposition from other major producers of the world's oil.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, presented the demand to a special session of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on his return from London where he consulted his government Thursday night.

Jamshid Amouzegar of Iran, later told reporters, in reference to Saudi demand:

"No one country is going to dictate its view to 12 others."

He said, however, his country demanded 10 to 20 per cent increase in two stages — half now and half at a future date.

Iran would continue to insist on a price increase of about 15 or 16 per cent, he added.

Amouzegar said nine of the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were asking for "moderate" increases, although one or two OPEC members were demanding "pie-in-the-sky" boosts of 25 per cent when the current nine-month price freeze expires Sept. 30.

OPEC's present price schedule is based on a basic charge of $10.46 for a 42-gallon barrel of Saudi Arabia's Ras Tanura light crude.

There are also various surcharges or differentials for higher quality crudes and for those produced closer to their markets, and delegation sources said a revision downward of these charges was nearly complete.

Surcharges on higher quality crudes have already been reduced by a number of producers because they have been hardest hit by the reduction in demand due to the world-wide recession.

In the U.S., Congress and President Ford appear ready to hold down oil prices for another 30 days while seeking agreement on long-term energy policy.

The Senate is voting today on whether to extend through Nov. 15 the oil price controls that expired Sept. 1.

'Skipper' King Dead at 84

Freeman "Skipper" King, the veteran self-taught naturalist who has guided thousands of children in local nature rambles, died today at 84, after a lengthy illness.

King retired from his job as Goldstream provincial park naturalist in April this year.

He was admitted to hospital Aug. 1 and underwent surgery later that month. He died today at his home at 813 Craigflower.

Hard to Top Hassle of Moscow Fender-Bender

By PETER OSNOS

MOSCOW (WP) — An automobile accident is unpleasant anywhere, but it would be hard to top the hassle of a Moscow fender-bender as I discovered recently when my little Russian-made Zhiguli (modelled after the Italian Fiat 124) slid into a bread truck at an intersection.

The police on the scene were polite enough and a single trip to headquarters produced the "spravka," a piece of paper necessary to get the car fixed and paid for by the special insurance agency maintained for foreigners.

The trouble centred on Station Number One, the body shop — as slovenly a facility as any that was ever set a motorist's teeth grinding.

After a three-week wait to get in — I was later told it could have been twice as long — repairs that could have been made in a few days took nearly two months. All four hubcaps were stolen and other perfectly good parts were replaced by inferior versions (an orange turn signal that blinked, for instance, with a white one that did not).

When the vehicle was finally retrieved, a new door

would not shut, pieces did not fit together, finishing was shoddy and the bill, compiled on a wooden abacus, included more than $150 worth of "repairs" that adjusters said were unnecessary.

A special 10 per cent tax on foreigners was also added on.

Full payment was demanded on the spot. After some heated discussion, the insurance officials agreed to pay about two-thirds of the overcharge — but not for the stolen parts. Only thefts on the street are covered, they explained.

Judging from the complaints of others, my experience could have been worse. A motorist complained in the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta a few months ago that at another Moscow garage, mechanics substituted old torn seats for his new ones and installed a steering wheel that came from a truck.

To get his car back, even in that condition, he had to pay a hefty bill.

After years of concentrating on heavy industry, the Soviet Union has only recently turned its earnest to the manufacture of private cars. Production has tripled in the past five years, but there are still only 3 million such vehicles for a population of 250 million people and production runs about 10 per cent of the U.S. figure.

Every year in the next five-year plan, the total is to increase another third, mostly because the Zhiguli plant built by the Italians will reach its full capacity. This trim little sedan (there is a small station wagon also) is the Model T of Russia — with a Cadillac price. The standard model 2102 costs 5,500 rubles ($7,000 at the official exchange rate).

There are no credit arrangements.

The explanation for my misfortunes at the body shop is that service and the supply of spare parts lag far behind manufacture.

In Moscow with more than 7 million people and the majority of Zhiguli owners, there are three repair stations. For the entire country, there are only 30 stations catering to Zhigulis.

JAPANESE FREIGHTER HIJACKED . . .

MANILA (UPI) — Heavily-armed Filipino bandits hijacked a Japanese freighter with 27 persons aboard today and demanded a ransom of $133,000.

The bandits, claiming to be members of the same band that abducted a Japanese woman tourist last month, warned authorities against any military intervention "for the safety of the ship and the personnel aboard."

A spokesman for the Japanese embassy said the bandits set a two-day deadline for the ransom and representatives of the ship's owners agreed to pay.

Two company emissaries were sent to Manila to gather the money and negotiate the release of the ship and the persons aboard, he said.

The spokesman said he understood the Philippine armed forces had assembled a task force consisting of three ships and three smaller craft to try to rescue the hijacked victims as soon as orders came through. There was no immediate confirmation from military officials.

The embassy spokesman said the seized ship, the 3,953-gross ton, Sushiro Maru, had a crew of 22 Japanese and five Filipinos, including three customs personnel.

It was loading logs in the vicinity of Zamboanga, 500 miles south of Manila, when it was hijacked.

The spokesman said the bandits claimed to be followers of Commander Jikiri who was identified as the man who masterminded the kidnapping of Mrs. Yoko Seki, Aug. 25, also near Zamboanga.

'REFUGEES' WELCOME

MONTREAL (CP) — Amid the current Anglophone outcry against Quebec's controversial language law — Bill 22 — certain "political refugees" in the province have been offered the opportunity to work in Alberta.

The job offer, by a company in Medicine Hat, Alta., was made in an advertisement placed in The Gazette Thursday.

"Bill 22 political refugees. Welcome to Wild Rose Country," said the ad, indicating that professional engineers and technologists were needed in Alberta.

PATTY MADE TIME A REAL PATSY . . .

NEW YORK (CP) — To the embarrassment of the publishers, readers of Time magazine's international edition found themselves looking at a headline without a story to go with it.

The banner headline on the front cover of this week's edition concerned the upset Ontario election that turned Premier Davis' administration into a minority government.

But there was no story about the election inside. "It happened in the rush to get the latest possible picture of Patty Hearst on the front," said one executive. "That's what did it."

Time executives said Thursday that through a production error the cover for the Canadian edition also became the cover for the international edition that goes to Europe and South America.

He said the magazine received some telephone calls in Europe asking about the "election surprise" but these calls were nothing, he added, compared with the flak flying around the New York headquarters.

Talks Urgent On Ont. Freeze

By HOWARD COLLINS OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial energy ministers will be asked to meet "within a matter of weeks" to discuss Ontario's freeze on oil and gasoline prices, Energy Minister Donald I Macdonald said Thursday.

The minister, concerned over the effects of the freeze on exploration, said the provinces cannot expect the oil companies to go on absorbing the $1.50 a barrel increase in crude oil prices imposed July 1.

"At some point we will have to get the provincial energy ministers together to discuss the issue," Macdonald said as he left a meeting of the federal cabinet.

The conference will come "pretty soon, certainly within a matter of weeks."

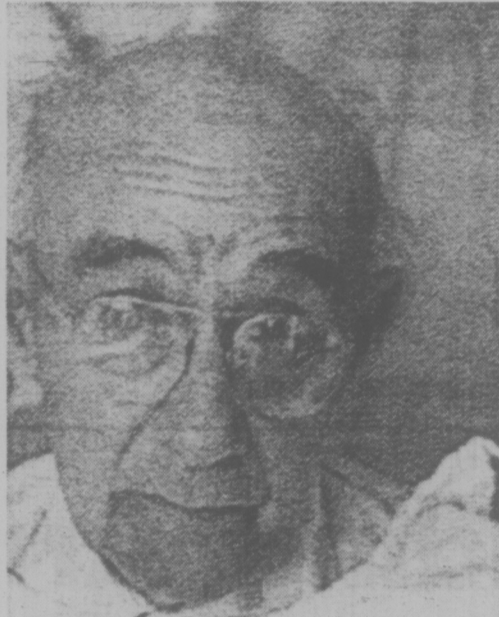

But, he added, "Frankly, I'm not optimistic that we can get unanimous agreement from the provincial governments."

Ontario has continually opposed any increases during the latest round of haggling over oil prices that started with a federal-provincial conference last April.

When the price of crude rose to $8 a barrel from $6.50 in July under an agreement between Ottawa and the producing provinces, Ottawa asked the companies not to pass the increase on to consumers until mid-August when existing stocks of lower priced oil would be used up.

But before the voluntary controls ended, the Ontario government moved to freeze prices until the end of September and to set up an inquiry into petroleum prices. Earlier this month, the midst of an election campaign, the provincial government extended the freeze until the middle of November.

First-Time Father at 74

Never quit trying is the motto of Bill Carpenter, a Calgary Septuagenarian. Carpenter, who has been married three times, this week became a father for the first time at the age of 74. He says that it was Prime Minister Trudeau's becoming a father after the age of 50 that renewed his own vigor and hopes.

Amin Wishes On a Star

NAIROBI (UPI) — President Idi Amin of Uganda said he saw a holy star today which will give him "great power and bright future."

Amin, quoted by Uganda radio, said he saw the "night of power star" for five minutes early this morning. The star appears only during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan and that the incident "promised a bright future for me and for all Ugandans" and also great power to Amin, he said.

Butane Exports Cut

OTTAWA (FP) — The National Energy Board has decreased the percentages of butane and propane production that can be exported from Canada and has increased the minimum export price for propane.

For the period between April 1, 1975 and March 31, 1976, a minimum of 60 per cent of domestic butane production must be sold to domestic users and a minimum of 37 per cent of domestic propane production must be sold to Canadian users, according to an N.E.B. official.

Previously, the minimum percentages for domestic users was 49 per cent for butane and 32 per cent for propane, the N.E.B. official explained.

Notification of the change was given to the industry earlier this month.

The ceiling on exports is based on the changing domestic supply situation, the official said. Meanwhile, the minimum export price for propane has been increased to 30 cents a gallon for propane during September. The minimum export price for butane remains at 18 cents a gallon.

Moscow: Car Rip-Off

lance on the part of mechanics who spend a fair portion of their working day idling under the No Smoking signs having a cigarette. As any Russian will attest, a bribe of two or three bottles of vodka is essential just to get minimal attention.

Any real effort, according to local experts, is expended on motorists' will to pay a hefty premium "na levo" (on the left) to get the car done in off hours or weekends.

"The work in service stations," a correspondent in the government newspaper Izvestia observed tartly the other day, "leaves much to be desired."

The parts situation is even worse. Replacements are in such demand that nobody seems to get any.

Once a Soviet motorist gets his car — the waiting list for a Zhiguli is now only a few months — the chances are he still won't have snow tires, a rear view mirror or other essentials. (Foreigners can order these items from manufacturers in the West. The average Russian does not have that possibility.)

Soviets always lock up their windshield wipers lest they be swiped while the car is parked. At Station Number One, the sole gracious gesture by the management was to warn that any movable part should be removed — tools, the spare tire, cigarette lighters, mirrors, I forgot the hubcaps.

It is sad, a friend explained, but every Russian with a car has become a potential kleptomaniac.

WORK ORDER

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa today introduced legislation ordering striking Montreal transit workers back to work Monday morning or face penalties ranging up to $50,000 a day.

The bill orders the Syndicat Du Transport, whose eight-day strike has virtually paralyzed Canada's largest city, to be on the job as of Monday.

left students totally unprepared for the real world, Bell Canada chairman Robert Scrivener said Thursday.

Scrivener, president of the Canadian Education Association conference that there is "a growing uneasiness between the real world and the standards and the content of the teaching in our schools."

"It is sad to see the cost to the individual of not being able to spell or even write passably — of not being able to do simple arithmetic and of being completely baffled by percentages and of not being able to read readily and even then not being able to comprehend written direction."

Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria local of the International Firefighters Association, said Larson is a "very fair-minded individual" who has done a considerable amount of arbitration work and is well thought of by both management and labor.

Cameron said when the arbitration hearing is called by Larson the union will maintain its position seeking a 21.8 per cent increase to give Victoria firefighters parity with Vancouver, but will make some changes in its fringe benefits proposals.

The city had offered a maximum of 17.5 per cent before the union decided a month ago to request binding arbitration.

I'd Be an Activist Too: Barrett

VANCOUVER (CP) — If he were a Black or Chicano living in the United States he would be a social activist, Premier Barrett told a meeting of executives from both sides of the border Thursday.

"If you don't give people social justice," he said, "they will take it themselves. You (businessmen) have made your backs. Now it's time to give something back to your community."

Barrett arrived at the Pacific Area Conference of the Young Presidents' Organization here in time to hear an FBI undercover agent give a talk on future kidnapping plots by revolutionary groups and see a karate expert give a demonstration on self-defense procedures.

At the beginning of his speech, Barrett went right to the attacks:

"Here you are, a happy, upper-middle-class in North America. What the hell kind of world are we living in? What have we been doing to ourselves in North America?" The premier said he could not believe what he had heard.

He said he had spent eight "beautiful years" living in the U.S. but "never in my wildest dreams when I went back to the U.S. did I think I would go back to a country of paranoia, violence and greed. For God's sake, what are you doing?"

Barrett attended Seattle University in Washington beginning in 1953 then St. Louis University where he obtained his masters in 1956. He also served as a probation officer for the St. Louis, Mo., country juvenile court.

He said Canadians are "scared stiff" about trends in U.S. society "because if you go down, we go down too."

He warned that unless basic services were provided for people they would rise up and get rid of the white, middle-class.

"All the training in judo

and so on isn't going to save you," he said. "You have to start sharing down at the other end if you are going to save yourselves."

Barrett said the U.S. would not be in its present condition if its leaders had built it in the way advocated by president Franklin Roosevelt.

And he said that modern-day Americans do not realize that George Washington was the Che Guevara of his time in fighting the oppression of King George III.

20% Drink Drive

CALGARY (CP) — More than five per cent of drivers on the road in Canada after 10 p.m. may be legally impaired, a report by the federal ministry of transport indicates.

The report showed 20.4 per cent of 9,744 night-time drivers tested had been drinking prior to driving.

The highest proportion of impaired drivers — 10.4 per cent of those stopped — were found on the road between 1 and 3 a.m. on Friday, with the highest number in B.C. and the lowest number in the Maritimes.

Drinking after driving was found to be most prevalent among males, middle-aged, unemployed, separated and divorced drivers. The lowest number was found among housewives, students and retired people.

Ports Open To Soviets

Times News Services

OTTAWA — External affairs Minister Allan MacEwen said today the fisheries dispute with the Soviet Union is solved and East Coast ports closed to the Soviet fishing fleet since August will be reopened Monday.

The solution to the dispute, which revolved around Canadian charges of Soviet overfishing in the northwest Atlantic, is in three parts:

— The Soviets will support Canadian efforts to achieve a 14-per-cent reduction in foreign fishing efforts off the East Coast at the Montreal meeting of the International Commission for North Atlantic Fisheries;

— The Soviet Union is to enter a bilateral agreement in the future covering fishing in an extended 200-mile Canadian fishing zone;

— Another bilateral agreement is to be negotiated covering formation of a Soviet-Canada commission which would deal with future fishing problems involving the two countries.

External affairs officials said six of eight equipment damage claims against the Soviet fishing fleet had been settled and the remaining two were expected to be resolved shortly.

Canada first proposed the 40 per cent fishing reduction in north Atlantic waters at the ICNAF conference in Edinburgh last June.

MacEwen said today he expected Soviet support would help carry the proposal when it is voted on at the special session underway in Montreal.

He was happy with the agreement.

Lisbon PM Establishes New Police

Times News Services

LISBON (UPD) — Portugal's military regime created a new security force today in an attempt to reinforce public order and halt spreading military indiscipline.

The move raised doubts about the future of military security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho because creation of the new "intervention force" undercut his authority.

Press reports said it could be a "no confidence" gesture against Carvalho by the powerful revolutionary council.

The council acted after about 50,000 rebellious soldiers and civilians besieged a military prison near Lisbon before dawn and forced the release of two prisoners.

The order to release the men apparently came from Carvalho because the prison was under his jurisdiction.

The action was in open defiance of calls by political and military leaders for military discipline and public order.

Politicians said the demonstration was designed to destroy the credibility of the military hierarchy and the newly formed sixth provisional government.

Carvalho recently made a controversial remark that he believed 1,000 stolen automatic rifles were in "good hands" when it was revealed they had fallen into the possession of extreme leftists.

The security chief, who has generally sided with the far left, also said he himself would distribute arms to civilians in the event of an emergency.

The intervention force is headed by Brig. Nuno Tavares de Melo Egidiom, who will report directly to President Francisco da Costa Gomes.

Press reports said Egidiom's political leanings were toward the moderate group of officers instrumental in the ouster of pro-Communist ex-Premier Gen. Vasco Gonçalves.

Light Urged For Death Corner

Installation of a four-way stop sign and flashing red light at a Central Saanich intersection where a Victoria woman died Sept. 11 was recommended by a coroner's jury Thursday.

The jury ruled following a two-day hearing that Sarjit Kour Mann, 43, of 401-655 Douglas, died from head injuries received in a two-car accident at Mount Newton Cross Road and central Saanich Road.

Excessive speed by the driver of the other car, Reed Gordon Pumble, 20, of 9150 Jura in North Saanich, contributed to the accident, the jury ruled.

The jury suggested a seat belt could have lessened the injuries to Mrs. Mann, who went through the passenger side window and was thrown into a ditch 28.5 feet away. Her husband, Sarwan Singh Mann, was driving.

At the time of the accident a flashing amber light was in operation at the intersection east and west along Mount Newton, with stop signs north and south on Central Saanich Road.

Pumble testified he was 60 to 80 feet from the intersection when he said the Mann vehicle pulled into the intersection. He estimated his speed at between 40 and 50 miles per hour.

40% FEWER JOBS GOING BEGGING

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of available full-time, part-time and casual jobs dropped 40 per cent from a year earlier to 72,000 during the three months ended Aug. 31, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Full-time openings were down 39 per cent to 65,819. Longer-term openings declined 45 per cent to 25,905.

For each 1,000 existing jobs, nine were vacant. This compared with a vacancy rate of 14 per 1,000 in the comparable year-earlier period.

The highest job vacancy rates were in the Prairie provinces — Saskatchewan 17 per 1,000, Alberta 14 and Manitoba 12. However, this vacancy rate is lower than a year ago for all three provinces.

Ontario had seven vacant jobs per 1,000, Quebec nine and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, each six per 1,000.

How Much Longer, Lord?

It's not much of a dispute as labor-management disputes run these days. Only five small companies and 300 truck drivers in a few small British Columbia towns are involved. It's tiny when compared with the supernovas of the past summer — the forest industry, ICBC, the supermarkets — that the government has had to juggle. It's entirely understandable that the authorities should have overlooked it until now to deal with bigger and more consequential matters that directly affect much of the B.C. economy.

But the lockout of Teamsters by upper-Island gas companies is escalating into something serious — restaurants and hotels and bakeries closed, several hundred homes without fuel for cooking or heating, chilly nursing homes.

It's only the unseasonably warm weather this late in September which has prevented any severe dislocation. But temperatures are going to start dropping soon, with frost expected within a couple of weeks. Doctors are worried for the health of their elderly and very young (under four years of age) patients, who are living in homes without heat. One medical clinic has said it will have to curtail health services if gas heat isn't restored.

Sadly, the crisis has been used as a political tool by some. Mayor Frank Ney, for example, is no impartial white knight riding to the protection of his subjects with his excitable talk about evacuations and putting Nanaimo on an emergency civil defence footing. The former Social Credit MLA for the town, with substantial interests in the company which is Nanaimo's biggest landlord, (and a directorship in the gas company which supplies Nanaimo), Ney would appear to have more than one vested interest in the outcome of the gas drought.

Still, Ney has been performing the job that the area's MLAs should have been doing. Where have Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich — who replaced Ney last election — and Alberni MLA Bob Skelly been all this time? If they represented a different political party, or the NDP was the opposition, you can bet their voices would be among the loudest protests now being directed to Victoria.

The logjam in the dispute seems to be a proud refusal on either side to get together and start negotiating again. The companies have lately reversed their stand to say they would accept a mediator, while the Teamsters' spokesman said his union would have to be asked by Labor Minister Bill King before considering third-party intervention.

King's appointment of a mediator on Thursday is a welcome move. His first priority should be to persuade both sides to climb down a little from their rigid positions and to get emergency supplies of gas moving into Nanaimo. The gas cut-off, like all strikes in essential services, is hurting the bystanders a lot more than either employer or employees.

"... well, let them eat cake and use a catalogue ..."

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Dizzying Roller Coaster Ride

Professor John Kenneth Galbraith of Harvard is unpopular among his fellow economists, little understood by the public and often victimized by his own genius of bitter irony. But whatever one may think of his theories, his latest judgment of the North American mind can hardly be denied. He says that it conceived and executed prodigies of all sorts, economic, social, diplomatic and military after the last war and now, suddenly, "the will to act has faded, we have more appetite for analysis than for action." And while apathy prevails no further prodigies can be expected.

If this is true of the United States it is even truer of Canada, Galbraith's native country. What, we must ask ourselves, has happened to produce the current mood of numb inertia, almost stupefaction, in a land uniquely endowed by nature and grossly mismanaged by man?

Canadians Misled

The immediate answer is as obvious as the question — Canadians have been misled, with precious few exceptions, by their governments, economists, business managers, labor unions and information media, the whole ruling establishment of society which has also misled itself.

The existing spectacle in Ottawa appears only as the summit of a total miscalculation of Canada's possibilities, resources and purposes. Not because it was dishonest or stupid but because it was simply wrong in its earlier assumptions (the Trudeau government has achieved its own prodigy of mismanagement) and the fact that its rivals in politics are even more bewildered and divided is no help for the rest of us.

Like the dizzy ups and downs of a roller coaster, the record of national government and all the junior governments, is too easily traced in hindsight.

The original fallacy that inflation would do no serious damage so long as it did not pass that of our foreign customers, and in any case could be overcome by the magic of indexing everybody's income, the solemn conviction that Canada would prosper no matter how it bungled its affairs because it had vast natural wealth, the incredible notion that wages and other costs had nothing to do with prices, the decision of all governments to spend far more than they collected and to cover the shortfall by borrowing or printing money — all these human errors came from the same source, the euphoria and intoxication of the big boom.

For reasons that only a psychiatrist could explain, and for the first time in their history, Canadians lost their sense of proportion and their governments happily encouraged them to expect impossibilities. That was the sure way to win elections.

Today, as a result, we find government trying to do two opposite things at once. With one hand on the levers of the central bank it tries to deflate the economy by raising interest rates, limiting the money supply and harshly penalizing all borrowers. With the other it inflates the economy by its reckless deficit spending. It asks everybody else to restrain his appetite when his own is insatiable. It simultaneously fights recession and inflation and, falling between two stools, fails in both fights.

Such to be sure, is the dilemma of all governments in the post — Keynesian age when the old rules of economics don't work any more, when the vehicle of society has long been driven downhill with a foot on the accelerator and now is driven uphill with a foot on the brake. Any man who drove his car so dangerously would be barred from the road. But governments are not subject to the traffic laws and change them at will.

The real core of the dilemma is that North America, and especially Canada, have assumed, first, that an ever-rising standard of consumption would cure or at least temper all human ills and, second, that such a standard could be maintained without pause even if the necessary resources were lacking, the population was outrunning them, the demand was far greater than the supply, the reach exceeding the grasp. And this happens to be true in the long run even if, for the moment, the supply of some things is greater than the demand, many factories are not working full time and many productive workers are idle, their production lost.

Theories Debauched

Keynes, whose theories cured the great depression of the 1930s and were then debauched by his followers, used to say that there was no use worrying about the long term since we would all be dead by then. Now we are already at the beginning of that long term and somehow we, or our children, persist in remaining inconveniently alive.

But no major Canadian politician except for a few murmurs by Trudeau in his better moments of truth is ready to tell us our continent, even the naturally-rich Canadian half of it, cannot indefinitely raise its standard of living when, in the short run, it is limited by mismanagement and, in the long, by the physical facts of a tiny planet.

The great debate will mean little, the mood of apathy will continue and the distrust of government and society itself will deepen until that most obvious of all facts is recognized. It is not recognized yet but disguised by the mere gestures and ritual dance of politics up with which the public is fed.

Boobus Internationalis

You know the type—loud, rude, pushy. Wears bright sport shirts and clashing pants, white shoes. Flashes a big bankroll, but always complains about how tourists get ripped off. Contantly compares things to his hometown. Things always better there. Crowds the scenic sights and attractions, gets the best seat in restaurants. Struts about with three cameras slung around his neck. Ignores local customs and bylaws.

Yup, it's that sub-species of bore, the Ugly Canadian, a relatively recent descendant of the prototype Ugly American. In northwest Washington state, particularly he has been generating the kind of bitterness and outrage usually thought limited to members of the Committee for an Independent Canada and residents of Victoria who came here from somewhere else.

Washington residents are complaining about the hordes of British Columbians who (with our higher wages) are buying up property and summer homes, flooding the supermarkets to buy cheaper food, filling up parks and ski resorts, speeding on state highways, gouging them on natural gas prices. They don't like us, to put it mildly.

"Canadians are now considered to be alien interlopers down here," said the publisher of the Bellingham Herald.

First reaction of many on this side of the border may be, it serves them right and it's about time, too. Pays them back for pushing up the price of waterfront and resort property in B.C., monopolizing our provincial parks and the beautiful cruising grounds of Georgia Strait and numberless fishing spots up and down the coast. But that's plain spite and does nothing to further amicable U.S.-Canada relations.

Short of calling in Henry Kissinger to mediate, perhaps a simpler solution will suffice. Could a trans-border area be set aside somewhere where both unlovely species could congregate together? Kind of a wildlife refuge for threatening species, the Ugly Canadian and Boobus Americanus. Say Point Roberts or the PNE site in Vancouver or that perfect habitat, upper Douglas Street or stretches of Colwood. It would take very little extra neon and plastic to make both feel happy and at home.

something designed only to "create" something newsworthy, with the aim of getting one's name (or better, a picture) into the papers or on television — takes precedence over the real needs of people.

Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst might spare a little time from his frenetic schedule, dashing from ceremony to ceremony for the photographers, to clean up his paperwork. Politics is more than making promises and kissing babies.

Time for Cheque-Up

It's funny and sad at the same time. Laugh at the pomposities of a small-town politician panting for notoriety, and shake your head at the $2,000 in interest charges caused by his three-month delay in handing over to the capital regional district cheques for $74,700 — the subject of all the publicity-seeking.

It's a pitiful comment on the degeneration of politics when arrangements for a pseudo-event—

Compliant CRTC

I was amused by your bludgeoning of Mayor Peter Pollen for his critical views on the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (your editorial, The Mayor and Broadcasting, Sept. 17). Not that mayors aren't worth taking a poke at (or a sledgehammer to) once in a while. But in fact Pollen is much closer to the truth on this one than you are.

The CRTC is supposed to safeguard and promote a Canadian broadcasting system in this country. As regards English-language television, it hasn't been too effective.

A recent survey of viewing patterns in Toronto, for example, indicated that three out of every four prime time hours are spent watching U.S. programs. Some observers put the figure even higher. Viewing patterns in Victoria and Vancouver are not much different. The extension of cable distribution of U.S. channels to cities distant from the border, like Edmonton, Sudbury and Prince George, via microwave links, now rounds out the American influence.

A country can't build quality and relevance into its television if the latter's presence with the public is overwhelmed by foreign imports and by commercial decision-making in Los Angeles and New York. The commission, of course, isn't guilty alone for the above situation, but it is far from innocent.

The Canadian content ruling in television is in good part a hollow one. Co-productions conceived by Americans, with American stars, American references and dependent on U.S. sales, but made in studios in Canada, are allowed as Canadian content — a loophole exploited freely by CTV with the full cognizance of the commission. Or programs are just blatantly Americanized to sell in U.S. markets, ersatz Canadian content, again for meeting the quota.

Moreover, U.S. imports on the two networks tend to be crowded into the peak viewing hours 7:30-10 p.m., or 7:30-11 p.m., when most people are watching Canadian programming, by contrast, is more likely to be scheduled on the edges of prime time, still counting equally, however, for the prime time content requirement.

New commercial television licences, created to increase the Canadian television presence, are even more financially dependent than CTV on pushing cheap U.S. imports and films. These imports are often scheduled against Canadian programming on CBC and CTV. The end result is less overall viewing of Canadian programming rather than more, at least judging from results in Ottawa and Edmonton, where two such stations can be received.

Commercial network television within Canada similarly caters to the largest single market, in other words Ontario, B.C. and the rest of the west suffer both in terms of network production and in independently developing network programming without second-guessing and commercial pressures from Toronto. Without such western Canadian decision-making in network programming, we're never going to have Canadian networks in the real sense of the word Canadian.

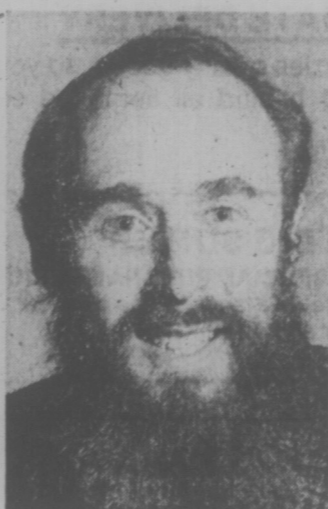

Some time ago, the Association for Public Broadcasting in British Columbia wrote to the commission asking for background information and research on both the Americanization of co-productions and the regional imbalance in network production. Knowledge of these phenomena is essential to coming to grips with what is happening to our television. Neither research studies nor information files were on hand. There is a research department, but the commission which instructs it does not have the same priorities as you or I.

Although the CRTC is a regulatory agency without taxing powers, it is not altogether without options. One possibility is to arrange a transition of cable licences to co-operatives, so that the money that now goes into profits and taxes becomes available for program production. The commission has met a proposal to that effect by ducking.

Pierre Juneau, former CRTC chairman, and Herschel Hardin.

The same applies to non-licensing matters. Two years ago, the APBEC submitted a detailed complaint on the misuse of the commercial format, by oil companies, for "political propaganda" — a practice which runs counter to the guidelines in one of the CRTC's own circulars. The brief called for, among other things, a public hearing. The CRTC, however, just kept silent while the abusive practice went on.

Finally, after a reminder and an extraordinary wait of six months, the APBEC's legal counsel set the Commission a deadline. Implicit in the message was the threat of a writ. Only then did the commission respond, saying in effect "thanks but no thanks" — backing away from an important issue again. But, in law, the commission does not have to be responsible, even to its own guidelines.

We are running into the same business again now. In mid-July, we wrote for procedural information on filing competitive cable licence applications for Victoria, Vancouver and other centres. Obviously, such counter-applications would challenge the existing cable licenses and the CRTC's relationship to them. Since a deadline is involved — and that's one of the things we wanted to find out — the matter was relatively urgent.

A belated response was received by us in early September. It answered questions we did not ask, while not answering questions we did ask. As of this writing, we still do not have the basic information requested in our straightforward and now repeated inquiry.

Either the commission is terribly incompetent in this matter, or it is terribly foolish in withholding procedural information from an interested party. Either way, something is wrong.

I don't gainsay the commission's good works, like the Canadian music ruling and getting after the CBC. But like most regulatory commissions, it plays its own games. It basically accommodates itself to the commercial interests it regulates, particularly protecting commercial television revenues, despite forcing the odd issue now and then.

The main domestic influences are the Ottawa-Toronto and the Montreal scenes. None of the current voting members of the commission are from the west, and even if one were, it wouldn't make much difference. Finally, whatever its good intentions and rhetoric, and endless manoeuvring, it has failed to devise a satisfactory response to the American stranglehold on English-language television in this country.

Not that any of us should be surprised. We should, though, keep our eyes open. — Herschel Hardin, President, Association for Public Broadcasting, Vancouver.

Naive Understanding

Bill Bennett's letter written to newspapers throughout the province in August leaves me wondering about the state of the opposition leader's mind. For one who claims he will "provide sound and stable management of our provinces resources" he shows a very naive understanding of the purpose of government and the history of British Columbia.

He attacks deficits of B.C. Rail, B.C. Hydro transit, B.C. Ferries and ICBC, the first three of which were created by the former government and have never been self-supporting. Certainly some of the increased spending by the new government is due to the neglect by the former Social Credit government in the running of the Crown corporations. A case in point is the BCR Fort Nelson extension. If Mr. Bennett feels that any business, large or small, can start without a deficit in its first years, it is a good thing that his father started the chain of hardware stores. The voters should make sure that his hands get nowhere near the control of ICBC.

I have always felt that the purpose of government was to provide people with services. To do this I would assume that more civil servants are necessary, more space is required, and more money needed. Yet Mr. Bennett says we can have "the finest levels of service" and infers he can do it without spending money on office space and without more civil servants. Your cake and eat it too?

Even more ridiculous and hypocritical is Mr. Bennett's cry that health and penal institutions are overworked because the government will not provide funds for additional staff. While I have every sympathy for these sentiments, was it not the same Mr. Bennett who is on record as being against increased government spending and adding to the civil service?

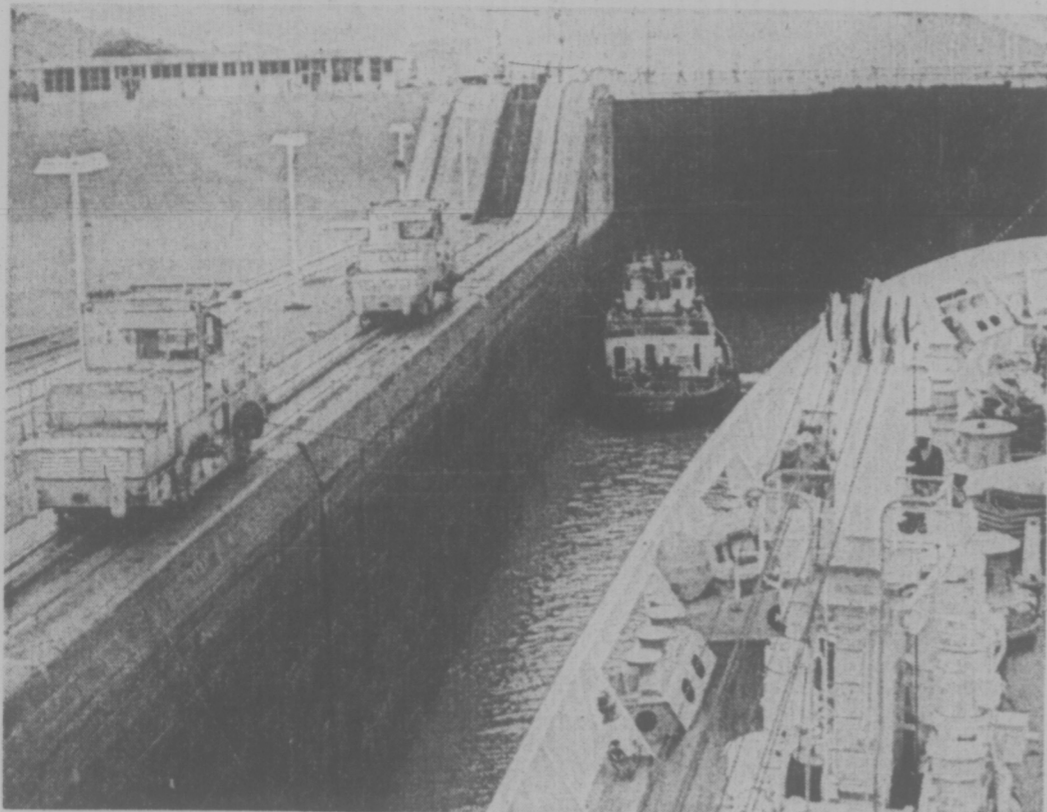

I used to have a friend who talked in circles like Mr. Bennett. He would say things like, "Nice day out if it doesn't rain"; or, "It's so nice out I'll leave it out." His name was Bill too. We all called him Crazy Bill — R. A. Sward, Price George.

PARIS — The allies began attacking German and Austrian lines in the east and west today, it was announced by the military authorities. The Russians took the offensive along a 200-mile front extending from Dvinsk to the Pripiet and German counterattacks were repulsed all along the line. In France, advances in the Artois region of the northeast were reported. In London, it was said that the Germans have lost 70,000 men — killed, wounded or taken prisoner — as a result of the two-day campaign.

Threat to Panama Canal comes from 'uncontrollable' groups

Political Unrest Brewing In 'Banana Republics'

By ALAN RIDING
New York Times

MEXICO CITY — An unusual combination of popular movements is transforming Central America from a forgotten mosaic of "banana republics" into an area of political unrest.

The impact of these movements is multiplied by the proximity and intimacy of the Central Americans who follow each other's affairs in the same detail as New Yorkers might analyze events in Washington. The right-wing generals of the region confer frequently in the Central American Defence Council, while the Communist and Christian Democratic leaders are also in constant contact.

Since their independence from Spain in 1821, the five countries of Central America — Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica — have had a common destiny and, even today, face many of the same social problems. Panama, which separated from Colombia in 1903, has only recently shown sympathy for the organizations of her northern neighbors.

Any sketch of the isthmus must include large, impoverished rural populations, growing numbers of urban squatters, land-owning elites, a few wealthy bankers, a handful of transnational companies, repressive armies and United States Embassies that always support the local regime.

But in recent years, new elements have entered this picture, the most significant being a radicalized Roman Catholic Church. Large numbers of foreign priests have tried to mobilize the previously fatalistic peasant populations into demanding land and justice.

Quietly encouraged by these Catholic groups, Christian Democratic parties, more radical than those in Chile or Venezuela, have also begun to gain strength to the point that, in El Salvador in 1972 and in Guatemala in 1974, their candidates even won the presidential elections, although their victories were subsequently fraudulently annulled by the entrenched oligarchies.

Ironically, while the United States government has been bolstering the established regimes with financial and military assistance in Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras, the United States Agency for International Development and members of the Peace Corps have also been sponsoring peasant co-operative movements, with the consent of the host governments.

This slow but clear awakening of the masses has caused great concern to the military and civilian elite that has ruled the area for so long. And, according to United States diplomats in Central America, even Washington is beginning to pay attention to the unrest in countries that have been taken for granted as stable and friendly allies.

What follows is a brief look at events in each country:

Panama: A nationalist government under Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera seized power in 1968 and since then has used the United States control of the canal and the 53-square-mile Canal Zone as a populist banner. General Torrijos' rhetoric not only led Washington to recognize the need for a "more just" canal treaty, but also heightened the expectations of leftist groups that wish to see the United States ejected from Panama. Washington's immediate worry is to ensure that the negotiations, which reopened last week, with Ambassador-at-large Ellsworth Bunker acting for the United States, produce a draft treaty acceptable to Congress. But General Torrijos is already having to repress the leftist and ultranationalist groups that accuse him of selling out to the United States. The threat to the canal, mentioned publicly by both the United States and Panamanian governments, comes from these "uncontrollable" groups.

Honduras: A church-inspired National Peasant Union has mobilized thousands of peasants who have clashed with armed cattle-farmers over demands for land reform. More than anywhere else in Central America, there is a genuine class struggle in the Honduran countryside; the ruling armed forces still are undecided which side to support.

Guatemala: An Indian co-operative movement, originally founded by Catholic priests in remote mountain villages, has emerged as the first authentic rural movement in Guatemala's history, so far involving about 20 per cent of the 3.5 million Indian population. President Kjell Laugerud Garcia unexpectedly decided to sponsor the movement, but right-wing groups have strongly opposed that policy and the country's outspoken vice-president, Mario Sandoval Alarcon, has even likened co-operativism to Communism.

El Salvador: In the Central American republic where the extremes of wealth and poverty are sharpest, the military government of Col. Arturo Armando Molina is repressing militant students and peasants to maintain control. Despite the repression, officials fear an uprising of hungry, landless peasants similar to that of 1932, which was eventually put down after more than 20,000 peasants had died.

Nicaragua: Gen. Anastasio Somoza Debayle, whose family has been in power without interruption since 1934, faces growing opposition from leftist guerrillas, and from the Catholic church and middle class groups that feel, in the words of one doctor, that "Somoza is paving the way for Communism." In a so far unsuccessful attempt to crush the guerrillas, General Somoza has this year sought to repress the rebels' peasant and student supporters. More than any other Central American leader, General Somoza enjoys the support of Washington.

Costa Rica: Costa Rica is the exception to most rules in Central America. She possesses no army, has free elections and her people, more Europeanized and better educated than their neighbors, enjoy the highest standard of living in the region. But there is growing opposition to the political influence of the fugitive American financier, Robert L. Vesco, who was invited to Costa Rica in 1972 by the then President Jose Figueres Ferrer and has been allowed to remain by President Daniel Oduber Quirós. One tin Costa Rican president would be chosen "either by three men — Figueres, Oduber and Vesco — or by two — Figueres and Vesco — or by one man — Vesco."

Venice Represents Test Case To Italian Communist Gov't

VENICE — In the spacious first-floor antechamber of the Venice City hall — an ancient Venetian palace that has seen its slice of history — elegant ushers in black tail-coats glided noiselessly to and fro as they always have done.

But the wizened old man — clearly a pensioner — who stood looking on, a copy of the Communist Party newspaper, L'Unita, protruding from his jacket pocket, was a novelty and a sign of the changes since the June 15 regional elections, in which the Communists did so well. Venice is one of 21 Italian cities in which left-wing Communist-Socialist governments have come to power since those elections.

As in Turin and Milan, the Communists — who emerged from the vote as the single most powerful party in most large Italian cities — will now have a chance in Venice to show whether they can set right the pressing urban problems that their predecessors, the Christian Democrats, seemed unable to solve.

But in Venice, whose unique problems often bring it under the scrutiny of international concern, a special effort is likely to be made now that the levers of power are to a great extent in Communist and socialist hands.

Venice could also represent a test case for future Socialist-Communist relations, for although the Communists won 33.4 per cent of the city vote and 10 of the 15 city-commission seats, the new mayor, Mario Rigo, is a Socialist.

For the Socialists, who are determined to participate in Italy's shift to the left, the present experiment in Venice is particularly important. With 15.7 per cent of the local vote — well above the party's national average — Mayor Rigo hopes to give his party a significant role in reform without playing second fiddle to the more powerful Communists. For, he says, whether the Socialists can hold their own — in contrast to the party's experience in the immediate postwar period — could affect not only Venice, but Italy as a whole.

Venice does not have the complex problems of such industrial capitals as Milan and Turin, which have swollen in recent decades with immigrants from the less developed south; but it does have a severe housing problem, especially in the city's historic centre.

There are high rents and the scarcity of modern plumbing have produced a drop of nearly 30,000 in the population in the last 15 years. (Including the mainland industrial areas of Mestre and Marghera, Venice's population is slightly under 300,000.)

The result is that some 4,000 apartments stand empty because their owners do not want to renovate or cannot afford to, while a growing number of wealthy non-Venetian homeowners — foreigners as well as people from other parts of Italy — threaten the city's Venetian character.

And Venice has other problems, including water and pollution, ravaging the famed monuments, rising unemployment and declining tourism, and the built-in handicap of divided jurisdiction among state, region and municipality over measures to deal with the city's problems.

Challenges of this sort, and the likelihood of opposition to radical programs to expropriate private housing and decision-making, show that the new government's work is cut out for it. But both Mayor Rigo and his deputy, Communist Gianni Pellicani, profess optimism.

The new coalition, Rigo says, is much more homogeneous than any of its predecessors, and therefore will probably enjoy the stability needed to solve what are patently long-term problems.

NEW RULES FOR POPPY CROP

AFYON, Turkey — The farmers dressed in black pressed around the campaign bus and in their enthusiasm tried to touch the speaker or at least get a good look at him. In the sea of banners one read, "The poppy is our blood. Ecevit is our soul." The slogan rhymes in Turkish, and the crowd chanted it lustily.

Bulent Ecevit, who lifted a two-year-old ban on opium-growing when he served as premier last year, was being received enthusiastically by conservative farmers in this impoverished region of the central Anatolian highlands, where the lovely purple blossoms of the poppy have been grown for centuries.

The Turkish-opposition leader kept reminding the Anatolian farmers that it was his government that lifted the ban on poppies. But this was not necessary, since opium growers in the Afyon region feel a measure of prosperity. This has been a good year for poppies despite winter frost and heavy spring rains. The government has brought up the entire harvest, paying good prices, under a new system of cultivation designed to keep the raw material for opium from the hands of drug pushers.

Until Turkey's military government, under strong American pressure, decided to ban all growing of poppies in 1972, most of the heroin used in the United States came from a milky white sap oozing out of the Anatolian plants.

The growing ban, which the Turks enforced rigorously, did not end the production of heroin — South Asia and Southeast Asia became the alternate sources of opium, U.S. officials say the price of heroin sold in American streets has increased tenfold, however.

Although the United States allocated $35 million to compensate Turkey and to help develop a new source of income in this region, the ban brought economic hardship on 100,000 farmers and disrupted the traditional economic patterns.

The poppy is not only a good cash crop as the source of opium. The seed of the flowers provides the bulk of the fat in the farmers' diet as salad oil. The leaves are used in the salad, too. Other parts of the plant are used to feed cattle, to make bread and for furniture and firewood.

Last year, Ecevit called in a group of international experts to advise him on opium control. The new program was drafted in the summer and the ban was lifted. Both Turkish and American law enforcement men are optimistic.

"It wasn't possible to cheat this year," said Osman Koseoglu, the chief narcotics agent in the Afyon province — the name of which means "opium." Afyon accounts for 50 per cent of Turkey's opium production and is one of the seven provinces in which poppy cultivation is allowed.

Koseoglu outlined the relatively simple methods of control but added, "I guess they may try next year to come up with a method of cheating, but it will be very difficult."

The regional representative of the U.S. Drug enforcement administration, Francis L. Briggs, said he was also optimistic. Opium and morphine base "are not available in Turkey" now, he said, although some drugs may be crossing Turkey via Istanbul from Asia on its way to southern France.

Another American expert, Stan Samuelson, who is an agriculture specialist working for the Agency for International Development, said he had driven 12,000 miles through the poppy-growing regions this summer and "I didn't see any violations."

Under the new regulations, the farmers are not permitted to cut into the poppy plant during the critical 15-day period when its bulb is filled with the white sap. All poppy growers in the seven provinces are licensed and their area of cultivation determined by government.

According to Koseoglu, the area is easy to patrol and "you don't have to get out of your car to check whether someone is cheating. It is very obvious."

The future of the program will depend on the performance of Turkey's law enforcement agencies. If lancing of the bulbs during the critical period is checked, the dried poppy husks containing opium alkaloids are virtually useless to traffickers. Extraction of opium from the husks requires complex machinery.

The new system could virtually shut out the black market.

Skeptics are concerned that next year the law enforcement process may weaken and reopen the way for opium smuggling. Others believe that Turkey is determined to show the world that it can prevent illicit drug traffic. Ecevit played heavily on this theme, repeating in his speeches, "We'll show them what we can do."

'Chance of a Depression' Like Never Before Seen

QUEBEC (CP) — The world may be heading toward a major economic collapse, Dr. Pierre Rinfret told the annual conference of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants Thursday.

Rinfret, president of an international economic financial counselling firm based in the United States, warned that inflation can destroy free enterprise and democracy. "In five years there is a chance of a world-wide depression of the like the world has never seen," he said. "If we don't get responsibility back, we're going to get it."

The outspoken business economist and sometimes adviser to U.S. presidents predicted an annual inflation rate of six to seven per cent compounded for the U.S. and 10 per cent elsewhere.

"We will spend the rest of our lives in an inflationary economy," said Rinfret. "Using the U.S. as an example, the Montreal-born financial adviser singled out five factors which contribute to the current inflationary spiral.

The U.S. government is spending too much and there is no fiscal control, he said. Local governments are contributing and he cited the financial crisis in New York City as a blatant example.

Three other factors are wage costs, resource shortages especially energy and the "do more and spend more" attitudes of politicians.

Can wage and price controls be effective? Rinfret said they may under some circumstances but not in his personal experience.

He said it was useless to control the private sector when the inflation problem continues to stem from the public sector.

"We have to control government and the politicians." A simple solution in the U.S. would be to end deficit spending, he said. But he saw no hope for this because "it's too obvious."

However, Rinfret said catastrophe may be averted through "truth in financial matters."

"Inflation obscures the truth," he said, noting that his firm had uncovered a discrepancy in statistical economic indicators used in the U.S.

He said the recession from which the U.S. economy is now recovering was hidden for two years because improper adjustment was made for inflation.

Earlier, Bell Canada president A. Jean de Grandpre told the conference Canada will require about $800 billion of capital investment for economic growth over the next 10 years.

About 95 per cent of this capital can come from Canadian sources if governments adopt proper fiscal and monetary policies, he said.

The reminder would have to come from sources outside Canada. Additional foreign capital would be required to replace Canadian investments abroad.

However, de Grandpre contended that Canadians can still increase control over industry and resources despite this recourse to outside sources.

"Foreign investment to the extent of five per cent of total capital expenditure is, I submit, compatible with a reduction in the proportion of Canadian industry and resources under non-resident control," he said.

POSTAL SUPERVISOR BEATEN

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey offered a $1,000 reward Thursday for information leading to the capture of two assailants who beat a post office supervisor in Montreal early Wednesday morning.

Mackasey said a 24-year-old supervisor was attacked in front of his home in the Brossard district as he returned after work. He suffered a concussion and torn ligaments in his leg. Two "hooded goons" who arrived in two separate cars were involved in the beating, he said. One of the cars was similar to a vehicle spotted in a previous beating of a postal supervisor, he added.

Mackasey said he was offering "at least $1,000 for any information leading to the capture."

"This sickens me," he said after a cabinet meeting. "A lot of supervisors are scared this will happen to them."

Mackasey said he did not know if the beating was linked to the post office but added that he hoped it was not the first step in a campaign to intimidate postal supervisors.

"If this is the intention, we'll have casual workers in there in five minutes," he said. The use of non-union casual labor in the Montreal post office was the centre of a dispute last spring.

Mail Rate Difference Explained

WASHINGTON (AP) — The reason Canadian postal rates are lower than those in the United States may be that the Canadian postal service does not try so hard to avoid strikes, says Postmaster-General Benjamin Ballar.

"Canada has had a number of postal strikes in the last five years," Ballar said in an interview. "Just about every time you turn around they're having a mail strike up there."

The U.S. never has had a countrywide mail strike.

The postal service agreed this summer to a new contract with its unions granting postal workers raises totalling $1,500 over three years plus cost-of-living increases. The contract was negotiated under threat of a strike by some union leaders.

After agreement on the contract, Ballar announced that the pact would increase the postal service's annual operating costs by $2 billion and require it to seek an increase in first-class postage to 13 cents from 10 cents by the end of this year.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Tentative government proposals to "steer" immigrants forcefully to designated areas of the country run counter to basic Canadian freedoms, the Canadian Labor Congress said Thursday.

The two-million-member Congress told the special parliamentary committee on immigration policy the suggestion was "foreign to the traditional freedom of movement of individuals upon which Canadian society has always operated."

CLC President Joe Morris said "It suggests a regimentation and a police system of control that neither the Congress nor the Canadian people would tolerate."

The CLC brief, supported by another from organized immigration department workers, was in opposition to the "steering" of immigrants suggested Wednesday by Immigration Minister Robert Andras and some of his senior officials.

Morris said sending immigrants to areas Canadians reject, to take jobs Canadians don't want would be a plan "doomed to failure."

If rural areas are losing population and if jobs go begging because of low pay, he said, the government should make them attractive to Canadians and not fill the gap with immigrants.

He said immigrants prefer the major centres for the same reasons citizens do — more job opportunities, better housing, schools, shops, doctors and so on.

"If settlement in new cities or smaller centres and rural areas is the objective," he said, "then we should plan in terms of people, not immigrants."

Waiting for Rhodes: B.C. Gas Firms Have No Plans to Drill

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's four biggest natural gas exploration companies say they have no definite plans for drilling in northeastern B.C. this winter.

The four companies — Pacific Petroleum Ltd., Home Oil Co. Ltd., Chevron Standard Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. — said even if they do formulate plans, there may be trouble getting enough drill rigs.

If exploration work is not done this winter, the companies said, new reserves, which will be needed to maintain gas production in a year or two, will not be developed.

The companies said they are waiting for B.C. Petroleum Corp., and the provincial government to set out the final form of regulations which would raise the price paid producers for natural gas.

Following hearings last June, the B.C. Energy Commission recommended that cabinet substantially increase the price producers receive for natural gas in order to promote exploration.

Cabinet accepted the proposals and currently B.C. Petroleum Corp., cabinet and the Energy Commission are working out details of the new pricing system.

Current prices are 20 cents per million cubic feet for old gas (from pools producing prior to Oct. 31, 1974) and 35 cents per million cubic feet for new gas (from pools producing after Oct. 31, 1974).

A. B. Bristow, president of Chevron, said the new rules would have to be out by Nov. 1 if any exploration work is going to be done this winter. Northeastern B.C. can be drilled only during winter months from mid-December to late March.

Jim Rhodes, chairman of the Petroleum Corporation, said the rules should be out in advance of Nov. 1. Bristow said his company has budgeted for development work on gas fields already drilled but the company has only tentative exploration plans for this year.

Stan Jones, manager of the Canadian Association of Oil Well Drilling Contractors, said even if exploration plans are developed there will be a shortage of drill rigs. He said few rigs from Alberta would be available for drilling in B.C.

MINING COMPANY WAS 'CYNICAL, WANTON'

VANCOUVER (CP) — An inquiry board was told Thursday that a mining company showed cynical and wanton disregard of human rights when it forced a woman employee to share bunkhouse and bathroom facilities with men.

Kathleen Ruff, human rights commission chairman, said that Jean Tharp, a former laboratory technician, was intimidated and became nervous while she shared the bunkhouse facilities with 19 men for six months at a mining camp near Ashcroft.

She moved into the bunkhouse in September, 1974, after the commission issued an order requiring equal accommodation for women at the camp. She wants reimbursement of $331 she was charged for room and board while there.

"My argument is that they didn't provide conditions on the same basis and terms," Ruff said.

She said there was no comparison of facilities provided Tharp and the men at camp because it contravened law, contravened all normal standards of decency and the men previously did not have to share facilities with women.

Ruff said Lorne argued that it would have been discriminatory to provide Miss Tharp or other women with separate facilities.

"In my mind it is a very serious matter," said Ruff.

It not only embarrassed

Tharp, it intimidated any other women from asking for equal rights.

Double-A Credit Rating For Municipal Fund Body

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Municipal Finance Authority of B.C., which has borrowed $168.5 million in the last four years for the province's regional districts and municipalities, has been given a double-A rating by three United States agencies, Moody's, Standard and Poor's and Fitch's. Chairman Ron Andrews, mayor of North Vancouver district, said the new rating will result in a saving of one-quarter of one per cent in interest costs which, on the basis of the MFA borrowing an estimated $70 million a year, will produce savings of some $32 million during the next 20 years.

SICAMOUS (CP) — Two juvenile boys were arrested by police Thursday after fire broke out in the gymnasium and offices of the Eagle River Junior Secondary School at this community 60 miles east of Kamloops. Fire officials said arson is suspected in the blaze which Howard Engman, an administrator for School District 89, said caused $750,000 damage. The 340 students at the school should be back to classes in about 10 days when portable classrooms arrive. No injuries were reported.

ELKFORD (CP) — United Steelworkers of America, Local 7884, voted 67 per cent Thursday in favor of staying off work at the Fording coal operations of Cominco Ltd. Union local president Lorne Ryder said the union wants a guarantee from the company that no reprisals will be taken against about 80 employees who walked off the job Monday in support of a dismissed worker. About 1,000 workers are involved in the walkout.

MISSION (CP) — Thirty-five persons were evacuated Thursday from the municipal hall after an anonymous caller said a bomb had been planted in the hall. The caller said the bomb would go off at noon. There was no explosion and no bomb was found when RCMP searched the hall.

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A coroner's inquest declared Thursday that Steven Kostluk, 60, of Qualicum Beach, committed suicide. Kostluk was found hanged Sept. 3 in an RCMP cell here after being arrested for impaired driver.

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Mayor Jim Fraser of Williams Lake told the provincial electoral boundaries commission Thursday his town would like to see the Cariboo riding boundaries slightly changed to conform with those of the Cariboo regional district. The move would mean elimination of Clinton and Cache Creek Villages on the riding's southern end and Hixon in the north from the riding, he said. Quesnel alderman Gloria Lazzarin said her council and the Quesnel and District Chamber of Commerce support Fraser's plan.

Boy Handed Over To Welfare Team

VANCOUVER (CP) — An eight-year-old boy found starving in the Kitsilano area of Vancouver was placed in the care of child welfare officials Thursday.

John Lynn, spokesman for the Vancouver Resources Board which operates the city's social services, said custody was formally granted by a family court judge.

Meanwhile, two persons who rescued the boy, Mark, after finding him in a state of near collapse from malnutrition and exposure, were waiting for word whether they could visit him in hospital.

John Christian and Stephanie Tolfield had visited him after finding him on Saturday. They said they were barred from visiting him Monday for what they were told were security reasons.

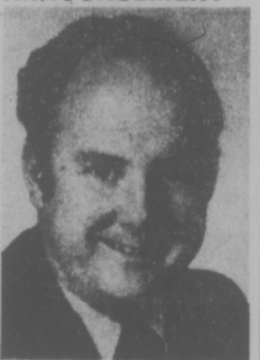

Lynn said that in cases where there is publicity, a policy of security is enforced to protect the child. In some similar cases emotionally upset persons have threatened to kidnap a child, he said.

Mark was found to have two burn scars on his backside and bruises indicating a beating. Lynn said the agency is mainly concerned in helping people and not in establishing a case to prosecute in court.

He said many of the persons who call in now, including parents who want help to stop abusing their children, would be frightened if they thought police could be notified.

"We're primarily concerned with protection of children, not taking legal action," Lynn said.

MAINLAND POLICE GROOMING RULES SET

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Police Board ratified Thursday new grooming and hair regulations for city policemen to come into effect Nov. 1.

The new regulations say moustaches can not extend more than one inch beyond the corners of the mouth; that hair can not extend beyond the collar, and sideburns can not extend beyond mouth level.

The board also approved amendments to regulations that outlaw the wearing of puka shell necklaces that have been worn by some policemen recently.

Superintendent Tom Herdman told the board there has been little opposition within the department to the new regulations.

Only San Quentin Worse Than B.C. Pen—Expert

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Conditions in the British Columbia Penitentiary's solitary confinement unit are comparable to those in Soledad and San Quentin prisons, a California criminologist told a federal court judge Thursday.

Dr. Richard Korn, once an associate warden at the New Jersey State Prison, said that conditions in solitary at the B.C. Penitentiary were among the most severe he had seen.

Dr. Korn testified before Mr. Justice D. V. Heald in a civil action by eight B.C. Penitentiary prisoners charging cruel and unusual punishment in the solitary confinement unit.

Dr. Korn, director of the centre for Study of Criminal Justice at the University of California in Berkeley, said that he knew of no other prison in which prison guards carried rifles in solitary units.

"The size of the cells (at the B.C. Penitentiary) is absolutely shocking; the absence of television is very shocking," said Dr. Korn.

He said that the solitary prisoners, in addition to other amenities, should have larger chambers, exercise under the sky and be able to see into the distance.

In describing physical aspects of solitary at the B.C. Penitentiary, he said he knew of "no place except the worst of San Quentin" where there were similar physical conditions.

Dr. Korn said that the San Quentin unit has also been under attack.

He said that at the New Jersey Prison in the 1950s he was responsible for setting up a new type of solitary unit, but later was to regret it, although it appeared humane.

At the New Jersey Prison, he said, were a number of "dons of the Mafia," including hit men who were serving time as a result of the United States Senate organized crime hearings.

"Half of the guards were on their payroll," said Dr. Korn, and gangster Joe Adonis was in the prison honor area regularly playing golf.

The gangsters ran the prison, he said.

"We found eight honest guards," said Dr. Korn. "One night we raided the prison, removed 40 men to the county jail and started to build a prison within a prison."

Korn said the men were told "we cannot run this prison with you running around loose. Therefore we are confining you with all privileges and amenities to one section."

They were given normal cells, radios, books and allowed many visitors.

"We put television in because we saw the effects of this were so ghastly," he said.

Dr. Korn said it was his purpose to get the men into a submissive state and called it "a highly immoral objective."

"To my subsequent horror we succeeded. It's foolproof."

Dr. Korn said that the most well-intentioned solitary guard must become hardened to the suffering of prisoners for his own mental survival, in the same way that morticians become hardened to death and surgeons become hardened to blood.

The prisoner, he said, is deprived of any human contact and must, to remain human, interact with guards.

Prisoners must be hostile to guards because of a prison code that is enforced sometimes by the death penalty, said Dr. Korn.

"If an inmate gets a reputation as a goodie-goodie he can lose his life for it," he said.

Lawyer Bryan Williams, acting for the eight prisoners who were in solitary at the B.C. Penitentiary, asked Dr. Korn to compare solitary confinement with strapping, whipping and other physical tortures.

Referring to frequent reports of self-inflicted wounds in solitary, he said that if "you keep people long enough they will choose self-torture."

Asked if solitary confinement caused permanent damage, Dr. Korn looked at four prisoners across the courtroom who were chained to the guards and said:

"The men are in the room and it would be anti-therapeutic for me to say they are permanently damaged."

JUDGE TO RULE ON ITU ACTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge reserved his decision Thursday on whether a union member can be expelled from his union for refusing to do an unlawful act.

Supreme Court Judge R. P. Anderson received final submissions and evidence Thursday in a civil suit of 12 Courtenay mechanical employees against the Vancouver local of the International Typographical Union.

The 12 employees of the Comox District Free Press, a Courtenay-based weekly newspaper, were expelled and also fined $2,500 to $5,000 each by the union for crossing an ITU picket line in the spring of 1973.

The court action began earlier this month in Nanaimo, where the judge ruled that the picket line that the 12 allegedly crossed to their jobs was illegal.

Judge Anderson said his understanding of a collective agreement meant that employees had undertaken to show up for work every day, just as the 12 were doing.

A. E. Cocking, counsel for the union, agreed the union couldn't force members into illegal acts, but argued that under law the picket line was not illegal.

He also agreed with Judge Anderson there are no penalty provisions or suspension rights in the ITU regulations, but said that the union executive has the power to do what is in the best interests of the union.

Earlier the judge said that the 12 workers had tried without success to get out of the union and the expulsion meant the end of their livelihood as far as printers went in B.C.

The 12 actually have been working at the Courtenay paper, crossing a picket line that has been posted since May, 1973.

In another civil suit being heard by Judge Anderson, E. W. Bickle Ltd., publishers of the Courtenay paper and papers in Campbell River, is suing the ITU, charging illegal picketing and a conspiracy to put the company out of business by setting up a rival paper in conjunction with Harry Harris, publisher of the Island Star.

Judge Anderson has already ruled the picketing is illegal and is expected to give his decision today on the conspiracy issue.

Return Of Tots To Be Aided

VANCOUVER (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachern has instructed Canadian embassy officials in Manila to do all they can short of court action to gain the return of five British Columbia children taken by their father, Simma Holt, Liberal MP for Vancouver-Kingsway, said Thursday.

In a letter to Mrs. Holt, MacEachern said Canada has no extradition treaty with the Philippines, where the children of Fraser Valley housewife Millie Clarke have been taken by their father, Eduardo Gomez.

He suggests Mrs. Clarke could initiate a child-custody case in a Philippine court.

MacEachern said he has sent background material on the case to the Manila embassy and has instructed officials to approach Manila authorities on the return of the children to Canada.

"In other words, he's going to see if he can do it through the diplomatic route," Mrs. Holt said in an interview.

Mrs. Clarke, who has legal custody of the children born when she lived with Gomez, has written Imelda Marcos, wife of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, in an appeal to get them back.

Reject Tel Rate Hike—A-G

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 20-per-cent rate increase sought by the British Columbia Telephone Co. Ltd. should not be granted because the company hasn't acted in the public interest, a Canadian Transport Commission hearing was told Thursday.

The submission was made by Martin Taylor, counsel for the B.C. attorney-general's department which has filed the major intervention against the rate increase.

The proceedings ended Thursday and Guy Roberge, chairman of the commission committee hearing the application, said a decision should be ready by mid-October.

B.C. Tel already has been granted an increase of 10 per cent and the new rates went into effect Aug. 1.

Taylor also urged dismissal because B.C. Tel "has woefully failed to meet the onus of showing prudent management, the exercise of independent judgment and dedication to the service of the public."

"I ask you to dismiss the application and leave it to the federal governmental authorities . . . to determine the appropriate remedy to be proposed to Parliament . . ."

The company and its chief opponent found one subject of agreement as Taylor endorsed a company proposal to reduce the telephone charges to old age pensioners by 50 per cent, qualifying the approval with a suggestion that it be "one-half the charge for the available basic service in that locality," possibly dual or multi-service.

Taylor attacked what he called "appalling abuse" of power by General Telephone and Electronics, the parent company of B.C. Tel and its corporate family to get B.C. Tel to purchase its products and services, a charge made frequently during the hearing and denied by company witnesses.

Lawyer Peter Butler, representing B.C. Tel said the company has proven that it has met the onus on it about responsibility, that it is in an intolerable financial position, and must have relief.

Butler pointed to evidence of a steady deterioration in the operating margin of B.C. Tel since 1964, operating expenses rising much faster than revenues and continuing damage from inflation.

The company, he said, is faced with a large capital program that cannot, except at grave risk to operations and much higher eventual expense, be put off. The program makes mandatory external financing of $183 million in 1975, and $210 million in 1976.

LIFE ISN'T SO GAY NOW FOR SIPPLE . . .

SAN FRANCISCO — Former marine Oliver Sipple, who deflected the gun used in the latest assassination attempt on President Ford, says his mother is afraid to step out of her house because neighbors are talking about published reports that her son is a homosexual.

"This is his reward for saving the president's life," said lawyer John Wahl, who has represented gay groups in court.

"We are very seriously considering action against news media which have carried the stories which destroyed 32 years of family life enjoyed with his mother and father and other personal relationships with friends," Wahl said.

Sipple told reporters Thursday he telephoned his mother in Detroit and the conversation had ended with her hanging up on him.

Leaders in the gay community are split between sympathy for a man they said was dragged into a harsh spotlight and anger at a man some said is hurting the gay rights movement with his reticence.

"What is he trying to hide?" said Rev. Raymond Broshers. "He's active in the gay community; he's worked in gay bars. He can hardly pretend it isn't common knowledge."

WEST COAST BEAUTY COMBINED WITH AGRICULTURAL OPPORTUNITY

This 26-acre diversified farm enterprise is located in the heart of the Saanich Peninsula. The farm operation consists of over 20,000 sq. ft. of greenhouses, complete with automated spaghetti tube watering and fertilizer system, and with heating, ventilation and stand-by generator units in good condition.

The fully irrigated 6-acre apple and pear orchard with five-year trees is just reaching its full potential. Strawberry and raspberry plants provide excellent cash crops.

The partially wooded property has a southerly exposure and is capable of further development for agricultural purposes. Additional features of this property are a three-bedroom home, a large implement shed, and a 6,000-sq.-ft. chicken house.

Price: $300,000. For further information and viewing contact

Revolutionary Feminist Patty Hearst On New Tape people

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — A private conversation recorded by authorities shows Patricia Hearst as a still-ardent "revolutionary feminist" who does not want freedom on bail if she is to be "a prisoner in my parents' home."

The partial transcript of the jailhouse conversation with childhood friend Patricia Tobin was released in court documents and made public Thursday. It apparently left Patty's parents shaken.

Her mother, Catherine, usually composed, called reporters "a bunch of ghouls" as they sought comment on the excerpted transcript. She and her husband cut short a jail visit with their daughter Thursday night.

The conversation, recorded last Saturday at the San Mateo County Jail, opens with Miss Hearst saying:

"I'm not making any statements until I know that I can get . . . bailed out, and then if I find out that I can't, for sure, then I'll issue a statement."

"But I would just as soon give it myself in person and it'll be a revolutionary, feminist perspective totally . . ."

"And so this creates all kinds of problems for me in terms of a defence."

U.S. Attorney James Browning gave the transcript to Judge Oliver Carter so he could make it available to the three psychiatrists appointed to examine the 21-year-old newspaper heiress.

Tobin, in the conversation, asked Hearst whether she was speaking candidly with her parents during their visits and Patty replied, "Well, I mean, like, the only thing I (deleted) I'm not talking to anybody real openly because it's too weird and besides like they listen in on everything and photograph, but, ah, I mean, I told 'em that my politics were different."

Hearst also gave this answer to a question that was deleted: "Yea, I mean, all of us do have it really together. I really feel good, like, now."

This followed:
Tobin: "Do you want to come home? What do you want to do?"

Hearst: "Well, what I want to do is (deleted) I don't want to have the 'bail thing' where I'm a prisoner in my parents' home which is possible, but (deleted)."

Deletions in the transcript were made by Browning.

Hearst's affidavit, filed earlier this week as part of a bail hearing, said she was "completely convinced of the love and affection of her family and that she will find safety and comfort in its midst."

Her father's affidavit, filed at the same time, said Patricia "is not only welcome but she regards our home as her home" and has expressed, over the past three days, an enthusiastic wish to return to living with her parents.

After 11 Years, Sartre Decides He Wants Cash

STOCKHOLM — Jean Paul Sartre, the French writer and left-wing philosopher who refused a 1964 Nobel literature prize worth $61,000 would now like to receive the money after all, a spokesman from the Nobel Foundation announced today.

But he warned that under the foundation's rules, prize winners had 12 months to make up their minds concerning their award, after which time the money was paid back into the Nobel fund.

EVERETT, Wash. — "I felt very sorry for him," said Peggy Davis of the man who had held her hostage at gunpoint for four hours in the men's room of a state welfare office. Davis, an employee of the department of social and health services, was working behind the counter Thursday when James Chapman, 30, armed with a rifle, walked into the office. He took Mrs. Davis hostage and demanded to see his estranged wife and a reporter. Finally, police told Chapman his wife was on the phone and ready to talk. He turned his rifle over to Davis and surrendered.

NEW YORK — Bob Considine, columnist, author and war correspondent for more than 25 years, died Thursday following a stroke. He was 67. Considine was the author of many magazine articles and a number of best-selling books, including Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo.

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI celebrated his 78th birthday today in apparent good health and spirits, buoyed by the success of Holy Year celebrations. Vatican sources said no special ceremonies were planned aside from the traditional birthday cake baked by nuns in the Apostolic Palace who prepare the Pontiff's daily meals. The Pope suffers from arthritis, a painful arthritic ailment that has attacked his back and right knee, but has not had a major health problem since undergoing successful prostate gland surgery in 1967.

SARASOTA, Fla. — Promoter Glenn Turner says he is going back into the motivation business, only a week after he was fined and freed following a federal fraud-conspiracy trial in Tampa. Turner, who faces civil suits in several states as a result of his promotional activities, said this time he intends to keep his operations "super clean." He said he is only an adviser to a new firm which will promote taped, personal motivation courses called "welcome to our world."

ALBANY, N.Y. — A county judge sentenced Francis Mainville, former American Nazi party member, to life imprisonment Thursday for the 1967 murder of a Jewish door-to-door salesman. Mainville, 37, was convicted recently in the shooting of Harry Pearlberg, 59, of Troy, N.Y., on Aug. 26, 1967, the day after American Nazi leader George Lincoln Rockwell was assassinated in Virginia.

Police Guard For Burtons

JOHANNESBURG — South African police, with night sticks drawn, charged thousands of spectators trying to catch a glimpse of Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor when they arrived here Thursday.

The crush around the film stars at Jan Smuts Airport, where they arrived from Switzerland, was so great that police charged into the crowd of black and white spectators to clear a path to a waiting yellow Rolls-Royce.

Money No Problem

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. — Medical problems and not financial considerations are keeping the infant daughter of a Cambridge couple in a Miami hospital, a spokesman for the hospital said Thursday.

An information officer with Jackson Memorial Hospital said in a telephone interview that the baby, born to Ron and Annette Shmurr of Cambridge on Sept. 6 in Florida, is undergoing treatment for jaundice but may be released soon.

The baby was delivered at Holy Cross Hospital in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where the couple was on vacation. Mr. Shmurr said that he and his wife were forced to flee the state Sept. 11 when officials at Holy Cross refused to accept an Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan payment and threatened them with arrest unless they made a $450 cash deposit or posted a $15,000 bond.

VGH MOVES TO COMBAT BED SQUEEZE

Night Hours for 'Day Care'

The day-care unit at Victoria General Hospital — where patients come for minor operations and go home the same day — is going to be put to work at night as the squeeze for beds continues.

Dr. D. C. Carlow, assistant executive director (medical), said today that the 24-bed unit with its two operating rooms will be used for more kinds of surgery, starting next month, which will mean keeping some patients in it overnight.

Both of Victoria's general hospitals have been jammed in recent weeks and Carlow said the crowding has meant elective or not urgent surgery has again had to be cancelled in his hospital of late.

Surgeons have now agreed to expand the kinds of operation they will do in the day or ambulatory-care unit, thus getting the unit's beds into use overnight and hopefully easing the pressure on the rest of the hospital's acute care beds.

The change means that some operations which in the past kept patients in hospital three or four days will now be done with them staying just overnight.

Such a move is possible only in conjunction with home-care nursing, he said. This regional service has nurses visiting and helping recuperating patients in their homes.

Among the kinds of operations which will be added to the unit's schedule will be simple hernia repairs, some wrist and hand surgery, varicose vein stripping and some kinds of orthopedic surgery such as correcting hammer toes.

Carlow said the day-care

unit is now handling about 20 operations a day and this may rise under the expanded schedule to as high as 30 a day.

Asked if the unit might be used over weekends, he said there are no plans at present for a seven-day work week and it would depend on the availability of doctors willing to work then.

If there was sufficient need, it is possible the unit might be used Saturdays, he added.

The hospital's board was informed of expansion plans for the day care unit at its meeting Thursday night.

Carlow also told directors that equipment for the hospital's acupuncture unit has been ordered and is expected shortly.

The acupuncture clinic, first on Vancouver Island and only the second in the province, will be used to treat certain kinds of pain. Patients will be referred to it by their doctor and screened by an assessment committee.

Board members also watched a 28-minute film which included themselves — a videotape produced by hospital staff as part of an orientation program for new employees.

The film, thought to be the first of its kind for a hospital in B.C., was conceived by Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations, who explained that it can be easily edited for updating.

Diane Luscombe, personnel officer, wrote the script which describes work in various hospital departments. She edited 20 hours of filming down to the half-hour program with help from the media staff at the University of Victoria.

$115,000 Released For Centre

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

The United Way has decided to release $115,000 for the construction of an activity centre for the handicapped in Greater Victoria, Shirley Dowell, president of the United Way, said today.

"The board of directors has unanimously agreed to lift all three conditions originally placed on the release of the money," said Dowell.

The conditions, set in 1970, were that the centre be fully funded; United Way have the right to occupy 2,000 square feet in the proposed centre; and the name of the building be suitably identified with United Way.

The activity centre board, however, found these conditions unacceptable and a five-year tug-of-war for the funds began.

She said $15,000, part of the Montford estate which was left in trust to the United Way until such time as the Community Council decided how best to use it, will be released to the activity centre immediately. The remaining $100,000, most of which is from the T. S. McPherson estate, will be released by Jan. 30, 1976.

Floyd Fairclough, president of the activity centre's board, said he is "indeed grateful" that United Way has decided to make the $100,000 grant and release the $15,000 without restrictions.

He said the centre now has $1,107,000 in capital funds and is only $33,829 away from completing the first phase of development which would provide a functional building by April, 1976.

The centre has applied to the provincial government under the Community Recreational Facilities Fund Act for these additional funds.

The centre, to be built near the Saanich municipal hall on Vernon Avenue, would integrate such services for the handicapped as paramedical, visiting home nursing, meals on wheels, physiotherapy and occupational therapy, screening and assessment of the handicapped, transportation, recreation and educational services.

SC Had Enough Already

Lawyer George Jones has dropped out of the Social Credit nomination race in Victoria because he has lost enthusiasm for doing political battle.

"I think the whole tone of politics in the province is bad," he said, adding the choice between parties isn't distinct enough.

In addition, he said, he was expected to spend too much time fighting the NDP. His supporters in the nomination bid had good intentions, "but when it came to going out and working, they said, 'George, you go out and do it.'"

Another factor is the recent statements by Premier Barrett that an election won't likely be called before next year, Jones said he thought the election would have been called earlier.

Jones said the Sacred campaign seems to have peaked early, but it will come back when an election is called. He said also that he would like to devote more time to his family.

Other Sacred nomination hopefuls are insurance executive Ian Rendle who announced his candidacy May 9.

The Victoria seats are held by former Liberal leader David Anderson and Sacred Newell Morrison.

TUNNEL VISION at Beaver Lake Park provided this view of Mrs. Sandy Cameron walking her Dalmatian Pye near work on a major new water line.

Pipe four feet in diameter is being installed across southeast corner of park to Pat Bay Highway, to link with future reservoir on Halliburton Road.

Gordon Head Alarmed At High-Rise Scheme

Ask The Times

New Bumper Can Pack 'Wallop'

Motorists should call in experts when trying to pry apart crashed cars with spring-loaded safety bumpers on late model cars.

And B.C. Automobile Association manager Ray Elston agrees.

The new bumpers have proved worthwhile in cushioning a crash at five m.p.h., but they may be dangerous in other situations, he said.

The bumpers retract with the force of a collision, but spring out when any attempt to separate the hooked cars is made and could sever finger or legs.

"They have quite a wallop," said Elston advising that caution be used at the scene of an accident and a wrecker be called to separate the cars.

The bulletin was first issued in Phoenix, Arizona, where police were urged to use extreme care when trying to separate vehicles.

Elston said the bumpers are featured on almost all new cars.

A proposed high-rise development for a scenic nine-acre site on Arbutus Road will be protested by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association.

Association president Earl M. Byrnes, 3956 Lexington, said members of the executive had expressed "concern and alarm" that the undertaking had been put before the Saanich planning department six months before the mayor and council learned of it.

The executive also will object to the principle of such a development, the first of its kind to exceed four storeys in Saanich and running against a strong expression of opinion by Gordon Head residents.

Byrnes said council will be reminded in a letter of a survey to which 600 householders responded a year ago. At the time, 78 per cent opposed this type of development in Gordon Head.

The proposal surfaced two weeks ago after having been outlined to the planning department about the beginning of the year.

Mayor Ed Lum said he learned of it July 1 and was taken by surprise at the magnitude of the proposal.

G. S. Bains, of Gordon Head Developments Ltd., wants to put 122 suites in three high-rise towers at 2282 Arbutus, the former home of R. H. B. Ker, who developed the property with extensive gardens.

It has since been advertised by Bains through a real estate firm at a listed price of $1.35 million.

On behalf of Bains, Victoria design consultants G. W. Bentham and Associates planned a layout to be known as Arbutus Cove Gardens, containing two 12-storey buildings and one nine-storey structure.

Each suite would be sold as a condominium for $100,000-$200,000 and the estate home would be modified for $750,000 to serve as an entertainment and relaxation centre for residents.

Bains said the property was offered for sale as a package including the Bentham design.

He and his associates began discussing the project with municipal planner Tom Loney in January. Loney said it was standard practice to discuss such things informally and that he cautioned Bentham not to go to great expense at that stage.

Loney said the planning department wanted to look at the site and also made it clear that the proposed undertaking was "completely out of keeping."

He also said he found it difficult to take the project seriously when the house and grounds were advertised for sale.

Lum said proposals of such a size are normally drawn to his attention either by the developer or the planner and could not explain why Loney had not done so.

On July 22, Saanich dismissed Loney without explanation.

Lum meanwhile suspended consideration of the project, but developers continued to press for an on-site meeting with planners. Lands, planning and housing committee rejected this approach, insisting that regular channels be followed.

Wine of the Year in a Golden Goblet

LIVE CLOSE TO THE SEASONS and you learn that each of them, even our dark-and-damp coast winter, has its attractions. But the matchless time in a year that offers it is this golden interval between summer and true fall.

It's a time of blue skies, and sun-burnished sea marred only by the vagaries of the tide. The inshore kelp beds, grown to maturity, shine in a long crescent. The big glaucous-winged gulls have returned with their ungainly young from their island nurseries, and the trim little Bonapartes will linger until the rains.

On the land and in the sea, it's a time of ripening. The salmon now foraging their way toward the rivers have made their growth and are heavy with spawn. Rafts of black scoters cruise saltchick shallows from which the varied duck population of the earlier year is departing. Just before dusk we saw a flight of Canada geese, lordly mi-

The portents of winter are still no more than a hint of sterner weather to come. Along the foreshore the gumweed still grows more of yellow than brown. The chirring of crickets is woven into the sound-pattern of our lives: it will be with us until the first white frost stills it.

This is the bountiful season. If the sharp salt winds of spring blighted our two little fruit trees, we still won't go short of autumn fruit. We have apples and plums and choice yellow pears, gift of a friend whose garden flourishes in a sheltered river valley.

The little wild blackberries are gone, but any day now we'll go picking along fences where tame brambles run wild, transmitting sunshine into rich red juice.

It's a time, too, for laying against the months when this hiatus between seasons is only a memory.

These bramble berries will go into our freezer, some to be thawed for later desserts, some for jelly-making when the Certo that has vanished most weefully and mysteriously from the market shelves turns up again.

Along with her gifts, nature sends other subtle warnings. The big maple across the highway is turning bronze. Though our furnace thermostat marker has been grounded at the bottom of the scale for months, the mornings are brisk enough to make a quick blaze in our fireplace welcome.

Our woodpile isn't what it should be, and no use now to lament my failure to cut plenty of alder when the year was younger, to season for winter fires.

Still, that's a minor lack, and one for which a drift-littered shoreline largely compensates. It's great weather

Victoria businessman Liawell MacDonald pleaded guilty today in provincial court to income tax evasion.

His firm, MacDonald's Ltd., pleaded guilty to a similar charge. Judge D. K. MacAdam reserved sentence until later today.

MacDonald, 66, who runs a furniture store at 1420 Broad, is charged with not paying taxes on $17,009.91 income during 1972 and 1973.

The company is charged with evading taxes on income of $32,903.52 for the taxation years 1972 and 1973.

MacDonald pleaded not guilty to two other related charges and they were immediately dropped by the prosecution.

The charges state the total federal taxes evaded by MacDonald were $6,402.10 and by the company $4,520.98.

Department of national revenue investigator Glen Barras testified that MacDonald and his accountant came to the department's Victoria office April 10, 1974, and admitted the income that had not been declared.

MacDonald told the department he had been making sales which weren't recorded and putting the money in his office safe, said Barras.

Approximately 65 customers were involved in these under-the-counter sales, said Barras, with individual deals ranging from $30 to $2,700.

MacDonald had made an agreement with the delivery firms to bypass the normal payment procedure in these cases and pay the movers in cash out of his own pocket, said the investigator.

At the request of national revenue, MacDonald drew up a list of unrecorded sales, which totalled about $33,000, said Barras.

Investigation of the case cost the department more than $10,000 and $50 hours were spent on it, he said.

Since MacDonald submitted the list of unrecorded sales on April 25, 1974, he has co-operated fully with the investigation, said Barras.

Judge MacAdam denied a request that the court procedure be closed to the public.

Defence lawyer Craig Sturrock told the court MacDonald has been in business more than 30 years in Victoria and "up until this time he has no black marks at all on his record."

He said his client "has suffered very strong feelings of remorse, guilt, shame and embarrassment. He does not socialize any more."

MacDonald has already paid the tax owing and the interest, and has paid the civil fines involved.

He submitted a health report on MacDonald and asked that the minimum penalty be imposed by the judge.

$400 DAMAGE TO WASHROOM

Vandals did $400 damage to the men's washroom in Centennial Square Thursday evening by setting fire to some papers.

A Victoria fire department spokesman said the toilet seats in the washroom caught fire, creating black smoke which damaged walls inside and outside the washroom.

It is the second such incident of vandalism this month in the square, he said.

Tug Model Seen on Ferry

The model tugboat stolen from a display case in the Princess Mary restaurant two weeks ago is believed on the Mainland in the possession of an elderly couple.

Restaurant spokesman Gordon Schor said today a caller positively identified the $3,000 replica in the back of a station wagon on a B.C. Ferry bound for Vancouver. The Island Sovereign was partially hidden under a blanket but recognizable by its brass fittings and the nameplate.

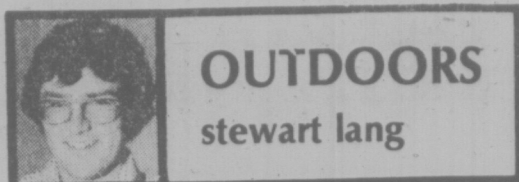

Schor said the tip was one of many received since a $100 reward was posted for information leading to the return of the model, built more than 20 years ago.

He said he hopes the publicity prompts the couple — accompanied by a couple in their 30s — to return the replica. The caller described the car as a light brown and beige older-model Meteor station wagon.

Schor said he has followed other tips, including one caller's lead that the boat may be located in a Victoria apartment. The model concerned, however, was a fishboat.

Another caller, Schor said, phoned late Thursday night and promised to phone again today with information on the tug's whereabouts.

Sports Salmon Fishermen Facing Variable Outlook

Salmon fishing success varied tremendously from spot to spot around Vancouver Island this past week.

Good catches of coho averaging six to seven pounds and chinooks averaging eight have been landed in Finlayson Arm. Trollers using deep lines (up to 200 feet and two pounds of lead) and hooties or bait are sharing the better catches with buzz-bombers.

Terry Warby topped coho fishermen in the middle part of Saanich Inlet with a 13-pounder taken Wednesday near Sluggert Point. Bucktailers using the green and white or grey and white patterns with about an ounce of weight have been doing well.

Chinooks to 13 pounds make up half the catch in the same vicinity and have been taken 180 feet down with plugs, strip and spoons.

Wain Rock remains the best spot to try off Deep Cove and fishermen trolling either a bucktail or action flattail just below the surface around 7 a.m. have been landing coho to seven pounds. Numerous jacks are also coming in from about the 80-foot depth on spoons.

Strip, hooties and buzz-bombs are nailing chinooks averaging 10 pounds off Trial Island.

Few fishermen and small fish have added up to a dismal return off the Victoria waterfront but the kelp bed at Pedder Bay is yielding chinooks to 19 pounds and "very few" coho. The chinooks, which seem to be of the winter variety, are helping on buzz-bombs and anchovies right alongside the kelp line.

Merv Gibson hooked a 14 pound coho Wednesday while fishing with super-strip near Church Island but action in the Becher Bay area has generally been spotty.

Wind has kept most Soke fishermen off the water since Monday but there doesn't seem to be any great amount of salmon around in any case.

And Port Renfrew waters, which start to produce around this time each year, are a bust. Joyce Elliott reports that 165 seiners were working about six miles northwest of Port Renfrew this past weekend. On Sunday, only five fish were weighed in by the 20-odd sports boats in San Juan Bay.

Fortunately, the netting ended at 6 p.m. Tuesday and the suns might recover a little by the weekend.

However, don't look for any great returns out of Cowichan Bay. Commercial net fishermen worked Satellite Channel from 8 a.m. Monday to 8 a.m. Tuesday and were given an extended period which started at 7 p.m. Thursday and is expected to end at the same time tonight.

To make matters worse, both Cowichan Bay and Portler Pass have been visited by pods of killer whales in recent days.

"Awful" was the word from Nanaimo, where even the commercial fishermen are having to work extra hard for limited catches. Best chinooks catches up Island have been in Alberni Inlet and just about every estuary, cove or bay from Courtenay to Campbell River is producing excellent catches of coho up to 16 pounds on bucktails or buzz-bombs.

VIKINGS OPEN SEASON

University of Victoria Vikings, runners-up in league play last season, open their premier division schedule in the Vancouver Island Soccer League at 2:15 Saturday with a match against Victoria West at Royal Athletic Park.

Vikings have listed Mike Sails and Ernie Carson as doubtful starters because of injuries and Gord North will be with the B.C. under-18 side in the national tournament in Vancouver.

West will be missing Mike Harov, who is also with the provincial team, and Ralph Anderson, who is nursing a leg injury.

On Sunday, two of the four 2:15 p.m. premier division matches are in Victoria. Cosmopolitan Royals tackle Gorge United at Topaz Park and Oak Bay takes on Duncan at Heywood Avenue Park. London Boxing Club will be at Nanaimo and Gorge Molsons travel to Powell River.

Water safety is like motherhood. Many people merely pay lip service to it.

But five young Victorians have found their own way of ensuring that water safety is not something you just talk about.

Stan Anderson and his friends, all expert lifeguards, have formed an organization called Advanced Lifeguard Training.

In 1974, thanks to a grant from the provincial health department, they staged clinics in both waterfront and pool lifeguarding from here to Campbell River.

This year, they're making it on their own.

Their first project this fall is a national lifeguard service pool option course which will run from Oct. 19 at 6 p.m. to Nov. 30 at the Gordon Head recreation centre. The course covers everything from basic lifeguard techniques to handling advanced water emergencies.

Registrations for the course — endorsed by the Royal Life-saving Society — can be made at the centre or at Red Cross House on Fort. It will be given by Anderson, backed up by instructor Wayne Rogers and secretary Mike Waddell. Their phone numbers are 588-5342, 582-9583 and 383-7087.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club starts a new series of racing in waters off Sidney on Saturday. Start time for a six-miler, beginning near the government wharf, is 1 p.m.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association held its first two races of the season last Sunday with 43 boats turning out in both cases. Twenty-two skippers, however, failed to make their application. Until they do this and get assigned their ratings, results cannot be tabulated. Get going, skippers.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will have racing for both keel boats and dinghies this Sunday, keel boats starting at 11 a.m. and dinghies at 1 p.m.

Ed Haines' Lotte was top keel boat last Sunday, edging Fred Douglas' Virtue and Doug Turnham's Barraclutta. Doc Beaudry's Black Hawk was the winning Sailerette. Dennis Reilly's Green Teal was runner-up.

Anne Buckley was top 420 skipper, beating Rick Jackson and Larry Restall. Dennis and Bobbie Carlow won in Fireball competition. After them came Rick and Pat Lloyd and Ian and Della Ross.

George Kirkwood and Pat Davidson won the two top places in Laser competition. John Ganton and Colin Nickols tied for third spot.

Dinghy sailors of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club have more series racing planned at Cadboro Bay on Saturday. Start time is 1:30 p.m.

sions followed by V. H. Patriarche and Humphrey Golby.

Joy of Drying Your Own Corn

You can discover the joy of drying and grinding your own corn for winter use. This simple, non-energy-consuming method of preservation was long practiced by the Indians and in many cases was the key to their survival during periods of crop failure. Certainly the practice deserves a revival.

Even the smallest corn patch is likely to have enough over-mature ears left on the stalks at the end of the season to warrant a little experimentation. Just let them hang there to grow bigger, fatter and tougher. Then gather as much as you'll need before the first heavy frost.

Next, pull back the husks from your harvest and spread the ears on clean newspaper where they continue drying out of the weather for a few more weeks. Then bring the corn into a dry room in the house and forget about it until winter.

If you're fortunate enough to have an old hand-cranked corn sheller, you can complete the shelling process in just a few exhilarating minutes of cranking, clanking and whirring. The ears are dropped one by one into the machine's opening where spinning wheels quickly separate kernels from the cob.

If you should come by the use of such a sheller, the only necessary precaution — other than keeping your hands out of the works while the wheels are spinning — is to be sure your corn is perfectly dry. Otherwise the machine will jam and you'll have the tedious task of picking smashed, gummy kernels out of its insides and out of the bucket.

In the absence of a sheller, it's not a difficult job to remove the kernels by hand (provided they're really dry). You'll find that your thumbs do most of the work, and may sprout blisters if you're overly zealous.

Once shelled, it's a good idea to cover your corn with cheesecloth — to keep out dust — and let it dry further. An occasional stirring every couple of days for a week or so should dispel moisture and prevent the growth of a gray, furry mold. If you live in a damp climate, you may then want to transfer the kernels to airtight containers.

And then for the grinding and eating!

To grind your corn you'll need any one of the several types of grain mills that are on the market. One cup of kernels yields about 1 1/4 cups of meal, and you should get a satisfactory consistency in two or three grindings, depending on how you set your mill.

A fine setting will do the job in two passes, but you'll have to work a lot harder. If you choose a coarser grind to save your strength, the corn will require an extra trip through the machine.

Another labor-saving trick — which also has some redeeming social value — is to set up the mill for a day or more in a prominent spot in the kitchen. No passer-by can resist the urge to toss in a couple of cups of kernels and try his or her hand at the crank.

You'll be repaid for the work of grinding your own corn by the knowledge that your homemade product retains the germ of the grain — the source of flavor, aroma, and natural vitamins and minerals. Commercial cornmeal — from which the germ is removed in processing — can be enriched to replace the lost food value, but its makers have found no way to replace the scent and taste.

You'll discover this for yourself when you first smell a bowl of freshly ground corn and compare it to the sterile prevent the oil from turning rancid.

No doubt you'll want to prepare some favorite dishes with your homemade product, in which case you'll probably find it necessary to soak the meal at least four hours before use. Or, if you prefer to try some recipes that are already adjusted to the characteristics of dried corn, here are a few to get you started:

For dried cornmeal pancakes, you'll need 1 cup cornmeal, 1 1/2 cups milk, 2 eggs, 1/4 cup cooking oil, 1 cup whole wheat flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 1 teaspoon sea salt, 1/4 cup dry milk and 1/4 cup wheat germ.

Soak the cornmeal in the milk overnight, and add the eggs and oil the following morning. Sift together the flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt, combine the mixture with the dry milk and wheat germ, and stir in the moist ingredients.

Fry the batter on a greased griddle at moderate temperature. Don't expect the pancakes to be light and fluffy! They have substance and flavor and will stay with you well into lunch hour.

She Used to Spy for Real — Now She Spies for Store

WASHINGTON, (NYT) — She is, by her own description, a "wine spy" — on the lookout for good wines at good prices on behalf of the customers of a Washington grocery store. When on the trail of a promising purchase, she is likely to confide: "I have sent out my spies."

In the case of Edmee Brooks the usage is a bit comical because in the Second World War, she was a real spy, planted in the German Wehrmacht in 1940 by the Deutsches Bureau, the French intelligence service.

For the next five years she was an intelligence agent, first in Occupied Paris, later in the Russian front and, in the last months of the war, among the German forces defending the upper Rhine.

When Mrs. Brooks tells a story about wine, or about espionage, or about her family, it is like drinking a single glass of good Burgundy. You want more, but she has put the cork back in the bottle.

She will tell how she grew up the pious daughter of an ancient Alsatian family on an estate where Silvaner, Riesling and Gewürztraminer vineyards were cultivated by people whose national loyalties always seemed to coincide with the German or French rulers who happened to be in power. But she won't identify the people.

She will relate how she was recruited for the Deutsches Bureau on June 12, 1940, two days after Hitler's armies swept into the French capital. But she won't name the person who did the recruiting.

"In that game you don't talk very much — not even," she explains. She was 18. Her chief, throughout the war, was a Basque priest who gave her cursory training in the use of dead letter drops and ciphers. With German she had learned as a child in Alsace she got a job in the German military government's Ausweisstelle — the place where identity papers were issued.

"I stole like a magpie," she recounted, "to furnish false papers."

Eventually, the Germans found that their identity-pass-system had holes in it. She and others were arrested and she was held three months in Fresco prison by the Gestapo. Upon release she returned to Alsace and "a big fight with my family." Then she joined the Wehrmacht in Mulhouse.

In February, 1944, she was posted to the Narva front in Estonia, opposite Leningrad, as a Wehrmacht staff clerk. There she made contact with Deutsches Bureau couriers at Reval (Tallin).

"I had a code name and a code number I had chosen myself. A stanza from an obscure and dismal French poem was the key for my code."

Posted back to her native Alsace, she was captured in Wehrmacht uniform by French colonial troops in a village near Mulhouse on Nov. 25, 1944.

"I was beaten up by an over-zealous second lieutenant, who knocked out two of my teeth because I refused to give him my signet ring. He took it too."

Her intelligence chief showed up to debrief her and give her a new assignment — back behind German lines.

She was caught and retained by the Swiss police at Porrentruy in February, 1945, and finally made her way to German-held Bregenz on Lake Constance.

But she lacked proper papers and was sent by the Gestapo to Saxony, where a visiting relative would be able to confirm her identity. The Third Reich was collapsing.

With only a few weeks left in the war she and another Wehrmacht girl were hit by bullets of strafing American warplanes. Mrs. Brooks in the right leg and left chest.

"When I woke up in the hospital I was in a cast like a pretzel," she remembers.

The end of the war brought her chief of service and a moment of glory to her in the hospital. "He picked me up and threw me in the air, he was so happy to see me."

After several interludes she married an American and settled in the United States in 1948.

Now she divides her devotions between an adopted son, a collection of Asian art in her Arlington, Va. apartment, and her wines.

Welch Medical Report

By Dr. William J. Welch

You might think if a man learned he was at high risk of having a heart attack and there were steps he could take to help him avoid such a catastrophe, he would hop to it.

In theory, it ought to be like that, but it is not the way it worked out in a recent screening program in California involving 2,324 asymptomatic adults with no history of heart disease.

The subjects were examined for major risk factors associated with a high incidence of heart attacks, including high fat levels in the blood (cholesterol and triglycerides), high blood pressure, smoking, diabetes and marked overweight. The results were given to each person examined and also to his private physician.

The first 1,250 of those studies were assigned to an educational program designed to show them how they might reduce the risk factors. They were given reading material, appropriate diet information and were invited to a series of lectures about the influence of risk factors on the incidence of heart attacks, and what could be done to limit those risks.

No instructions were given to the other half of the group.

A little short of a year later, everybody in the study was invited to return for another examination and rescreening for the presence of risk factors.

Only 1,817 people returned for a second examination. Seven hundred seven of them did not turn up at all.

There was no significant difference in the presence of risk factors in the 1,817 who were re-examined as compared with their first screening, and the same was true when the results were compared with the incidence observed in the 707 who were examined only once.

Moreover, the effect of the educational program was hardly noticeable. Indeed, more of the 1,817 who returned for a second screening were participants who had not been in the educational program.

And when comparisons were made between the "educated" who did return for study group and those who had been given no instruction, the presence of risk factors had not changed at all. They were just as overweight as they had been, were smoking no less, their blood-fat levels had in fact gone up and their blood-pressure readings were unchanged.

Thus, although it is clear that there is a high incidence of heart attack risk factors among the asymptomatic adult population, at least in this study, detection of such factors and education of the individuals tested and their physicians are not effective in reducing the incidence of those risk factors.

As a matter of fact, the doctors involved in the study suspected that in some cases their educational program had only succeeded in alienating some of the participants.

All of which points up once more that although we may know a good deal about lending horses to water, it is quite another proposition to persuade them to drink.

Pitfalls Abound in Buying Condominium

By LYNN GORDON

The purchase of a condominium unit is one of the most complicated real estate transactions today. For many years, condominium buyers have been unaware and uninformed about the many pitfalls and hazards of condominium buying.

As this unique concept in housing has spread across Canada, provincial governments have attempted to step in with regulations to protect consumers. Important changes in condominium laws have been made and it's vital for prospective buyers to check up-to-date regulations in their own provinces.

(What in most provinces is known as either the Condominium Act or the Condominium Property Act, is the Strata Titles Act in British Columbia, the act respecting the Co-ownership of Immoveables in Quebec and the Yukon Ordinances in the Yukon Territory.)

DEPOSITS
To be protected, your deposit should be put into a trust or covered by a government approved insurance policy paid by the builder. This will prevent a builder from using your money for operating capital, and if bankruptcy occurs, your money won't go down the drain with the builder.

If there is no such protection in your province, put pressure on the builder and your provincial legislature, to amend the legislation.

REGISTRATION
A condominium buyer doesn't get his hands on the deed giving him legal ownership of the unit until the project is registered with the provincial government. Until that time, if you move into your unit, you will have to pay rent, which is not generally paid toward your mortgage. In rare cases, the rent may be used to reduce the price of the unit. After registration, your payments go to the mortgage lender and the condominium association.

BYLAWS
The bylaws are the rules of the corporation (or co-proprietors in Quebec) by which all unit owners agree to live by. They are given to the buyer when he is presented with an offer purchase.

Many buyers neglect to read through the 12 to 14 pages of confusing legal jargon before signing the offer to lease and are ill-prepared for the limitations the rules and regulations may impose on their lifestyle.

The document, as well as the offer, should be thoroughly read and understood, before signing anything.

LAWYER
It makes good sense to hire a lawyer who's a specialist in condominium transactions and can help you to wade through all the legal jargon.

Make sure, however, that he agrees to take time to see you personally and is willing to go over all the details with you.

able to insist on a clause in the offer to purchase that will give you at least one week's "cooling off" period, during which you would be allowed to cancel out.

Never hire a lawyer who also works for the developer. There have been rumors of kickbacks by some lawyers to developers who push business in their direction. But even the most scrupulously honest lawyer can't help but favor the client who hired him first — or who can continue giving him business in the future.

MAINTENANCE
This is one of the biggest problem areas — and perhaps the most misunderstood.

Maintenance costs can be boosted along with inflation without any ceiling. Buildings need to be repainted and repaired, boilers break, elevators fail, carpeting wears out, wallpaper needs replacement.

Real estate taxes, property insurance premiums and labor costs all go up. Maintenance must be kept up on all the essential services as well as on luxuries like swimming pools, tennis courts, gyms, indoor garages and party rooms.

And you must pay for your share, whether you want all the services or not. If you withhold your money, a lien can be placed on your unit for the amount owing. Your unit may even be sold and you can be forced to move out.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

If you aren't pleased with the way the property is managed, the ball will end up in the laps of the board of directors of the condominium. Ability for managing the property and its business affairs without salary. But, in return for their work, they have power. Their decisions have far reaching consequences that affect everyone in the condominium development and they are responsible for large sums of money.

The directors may be dedicated neighbors but it's more important that they have some experience in running a business. They should understand the legal intricacies of condominium living and have sufficient insight to cope with problems to the satisfaction of a diverse group of owners.

Courses are available in condominium management and law at some universities and community colleges.

Since each condominium owner may be held legally responsible for the directors' decisions, it makes sense to take out directors' liability insurance.

DEADLY FUGU FISH SERVED IN LONDON

LONDON (Reuters) — The fugu fish, a sometimes deadly Japanese delicacy, now is being served to intrepid gourmets in London — but not as part of fish and chips.

The fish, which has poison in its ovaries and liver, caused so many deaths in Japan that the government introduced a three-year training plan to teach chefs how to serve it. It is said by connoisseurs to outclass caviar and oysters in flavor.

The manager of a West London restaurant where fugu is being served says: "We don't say it is 100-per-cent safe. It's the same risk as driving a car."

Despite the presence of three trained chefs, the fugu, flown frozen from Tokyo, has already claimed one victim here. A chef got poison in his mouth and it now is completely numb.

A spokesman at the Japanese embassy said most fugu deaths in Japan were caused by amateur preparation. He declined an invitation to sample fugu here.

TRAIL BLAZER CAMPS ANSWER QUESTIONS OF 'DISADVANTAGED'

JERVIS, N.Y. (AP) — What is a napkin?

What is a bed you sleep in alone?

Children — labelled "disadvantaged and endangered" — aged 8 through 16 have these and other questions answered for them at Trail Blazer Camps, 1,000 rocky and wooded acres 15 miles south of here in New Jersey.

To be "disadvantaged" means, in their parlance, that you've got nothing going for you. To be "endangered" means things may get worse. Things may get worse because some older siblings have been in trouble with the law, because some of these children may never have known a father.

Some have been victims of almost total neglect and often child abuse. They are children who aren't in bad trouble — yet. Trail Blazer Camps aim to save such children.

The campers are selected with the help of 29 social service agencies in New York City and Sussex County, New Jersey. The 80 girls and 48 boys — in separate camps — spend four weeks at a time living as "families" with eight children to two well-trained counsellors, a high ratio on the campfire circuit. Approximately 400 children attend the camp each summer.

They also come back for winter reunions, and Old Grads bring their families to visit. One Old Grad is Eli Wallach, the actor. Another is Vincent Loscalzo, staff artist for Fortune magazine. Both serve on the camp's board of directors.

Established in 1887, Trail Blazer Camps were formerly Life Camps. The 1,000 acres was donated by Doris Duke, the tobacco heiress, in the 1930s, but they exist solely on private donations. Lois Goodrich, camp director since 1934, says: "It's harder and harder to get money for children these days. Everything is geared to geriatrics. I know they need it, but so do we."

Each social service agency is given a quota of campers and each child assigned to Trail Blazer Camps is given two weeks of sessions explaining what to expect.

They are told they will live like pioneers, in teepees and covered wagons, build their own outdoor fireplaces, cut their firewood, plant and harvest their own vegetables, construct and clean their own latrines. In other words, start with nothing in the wilderness and work their way up.

Peter K. will tell you how they dug an Indian well, erected teepees, set up a kitchen unit by lashing poles they cut themselves to boards staved in the camp sawmill.

He'll tell you about the 13 fish they caught yesterday in 55-acre Lake Mashapaug, which is part of the camp site, about the snakes he has seen, the berries he has picked and eaten, the garden he and the other boys are trying to start and the fried chicken and biscuits they have every weekend.

Chores at the camps rotate with two children as cooks; two as firemakers, who also chop wood; two as dishwashers and sterilizers of utensils; a handyman who fills lanterns, cleans the latrine and carries water, and a waiter or waitress, who sets the table, brings the food to be served by the counsellor, and clears away.

A shopping list is made up with help from the camp dietitians and with a posted list of food prices from the camp store.

Each unit — 10 for the girls and eight for the boys — makes up its own shopping list and, while no money is exchanged and no budget is set, the campers learn the cost of each item and how to calculate cost of food per person.

Kooky But Lovable

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My sister's boyfriend died last year and she and I have been talking to his spirit on a Ouija board ever since. We have also talked to two other spirits on the Ouija board.

My aunt says that we shouldn't use the Ouija board because it is the work of the devil.

Can you give me any information about Ouija boards? Are they bad or not?—J.B.

DEAR J.B.: The only way one can "talk" to a spirit is through prayer. And you don't need a Ouija board for that. A Ouija board is all right to use as a "game," but don't take it seriously.

DEAR ABBY: I have an unusual problem. I look pregnant, although I'm not. I've always had a large protruding stomach. Then I became pregnant and foolishly gained 57 pounds.

My son is now 18-months-old, but I'm about 20 pounds overweight and look like I'm seven months pregnant no matter how I dress.

Needless to say, people are always saying to me, "Oh, you're having another one!"

When I say, "No, I'm not pregnant," an awkward silence follows.

Abby, if anyone can come up with a better response to the endless comments, it's you.—LOOKS P.G.

DEAR LOOKS: A more satisfactory solution is what to DO, not what to SAY. I know it's easier said than done, but if you would trim off that excess weight and buy yourself a good foundation garment, you'll lose that pregnant look.

DEAR ABBY: About six months ago I met a pleasant, middle-aged married woman while visiting a mutual friend in another city.

After returning home, I was surprised to receive a little gift from her. Nothing costly; just a trinket with a friendly note, "I loved meeting you. Keep in touch."

I wrote and thanked her for her thoughtfulness. A few weeks later, along comes another little gift from this woman. Again I wrote to thank her.

Then she sent a store-bought card for no special occasion with the message, "It's nice to have a special friend like you."

I acknowledged the card only because I would have felt guilty if I didn't. Abby, I am a busy, professional woman, and I wish this woman would leave me alone. It irritates me to have to write these thank-you notes to someone I hardly know.

Food Shortage Contrived—Panelist

Canadian farmers are getting rich while consumers suffer from high food bills, Dr. Leonard Laudadio, chairman of the University of Victoria economics department, said Thursday night.

He said an artificially-controlled food shortage is pushing prices up faster than the costs of farming and, as a result, farm profits have tripled in the past four years.

These food prices are 70 per cent of the inflation problem for Canada, he said. If food was produced in abundance, the cost of living would fall dramatically.

Laudadio was one of four panelists discussing the inflation problem at a meeting sponsored by Unitarian Church of Victoria, 106 Superior Street.

Alfred Petersen, representing the business viewpoint, said price fixing by major labor unions and a few corporations was the main cause of inflation. He said pay demands by unions should be viewed as price fixing because workers seek parity with employees in other cities, regardless of their individual worth.

Jack Groves of the Victoria Labor Council said high interest rates, credit cards and wasteful competition among private companies were the main reasons for increases in the cost of living.

Al Forrest, business editor of the Victoria Times, outlined the published views of the federal government toward inflation but said Ottawa was not likely to take strong action against wages and prices. He said the federal government has a vested interest in inflation, which increases the flow of money into its treasury and makes it easier for the government to handle the national debt, about $60 billion.

Moderator of the panel was Mowbray Clark of the Unitarian Church.

Laudadio said his studies as an economist have led him to believe that food costs are more important than all other factors combined in the present inflation problem.

BANG-BANG EVEN IN SUBURBS

DETROIT (Reuter) — Four British newspaper executives who had been warned to avoid Detroit streets at night found out Thursday that the suburbs were not very safe either — even in broad daylight.

The four were paying their taxi driver in suburban Sterling Heights when a second cab driver pulled alongside and several shots rang out.

Several bullets ripped into two tires of their taxi.

A spokesman for the Checker Cab Co. here said one of their drivers had fired the shots, apparently because he felt he should have had the visitors as fares.

The four executives had visited the downtown offices of the Detroit News. Later they took the cab to the newspaper's new automated plant in Sterling Heights, 15 miles from downtown Detroit.

Checker president Ted Nied said the pistol-packing cabbie was justified in feeling he should have had the fare and $14 that went with it.

Nied said that under company procedures the second driver would have been reimbursed for having lost the lucrative fare. Instead, Nied said, he will be discharged and will be charged.

"We're a bit shaky. It was a bit of a surprise," said Max Hallas, director and general manager of the London-based Northcliffe newspaper group.

"It happened very quickly. There was no shouting. Next thing we knew — bang, bang."

—Gene Shallit, WNBC-TV

"Totally delightful! There is much nudity and simulated sex in this film, but if your wife, or husband has never seen an X-rated movie, 'Le Sex Shop' is the one to take her, or him to. It is wholesome, refreshing and deliciously funny satire."

—Stewart Klein, WNEW-TV

"This charming French comedy, is the first really sophisticated X-rated movie shown, and proves that sex is not just fun but that it also can be very funny."

Simon Fraser University's quartet-in-residence, the Purcell String Quartet, will perform tonight at 8 at Open Space, 510 Fort.
The ensemble has recorded for CBC and BBC and has had an excellent critical reception in the course of tours in England and North America, including a debut performance at New York's Carnegie Recital Hall in 1974.
The group will play works by Mendelssohn, Debussy and Beethoven.

A challenging theatrical experience is being offered at Open Space, 510 Fort, Saturday and Sunday at 8:30 p.m. and repeated there Oct. 4 and 5 at the same time.
Theatreworks, a Vancouver project-research-oriented company whose artistic head is Gary Pogrow, is presenting a revived and expanded production of Red Earth which was seen at Open Space a couple of seasons ago.
Red Earth deals with Western white culture in relation to red culture, its impacts and complications. It is a concept of, and directed by, Vincent Hall-Balestri with collaboration of his wife, Kathleen.

A professional group, Theatreworks is so far partially funded by a small B.C. cultural grant. Its purpose is to explore original and existing material and to effect an interchange between Vancouver and Victoria and eventually to add Seattle to the triangle.
Among this season's five productions which Pogrow expects to bring to Open Space are Brecht on Brecht, an original version of Alice in Wonderland and an original Antigone, based on the myth, not on Sophocles' drama.
Memorable former productions brought to Open Space by Theatreworks were Crow and Bluebeard.

Grants Frozen At $34

B.C. municipalities can expect no future increases in per capita grants from the provincial government.

The government believes other forms of financing local governments are fairer and the per capita grant will not be increased again, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Thursday.

But next year the per capita grant will therefore stay at $34 but Lorimer said revenues from increases in the export price of natural gas will again be shared with municipalities.

The year the municipalities received $20 million.

Lorimer said the formula which gives municipalities one-third of the increased provincial gas revenues will be applied next year but that he didn't know how much money that will amount to.

The province believes, he said, that other forms of financing through sewage facility funds, recreational grants, and takeover of the costs of administration of justice and welfare in local areas, are more equitable than straight grants.

He said he would welcome suggestions from municipalities on how to divide up provincial funds between local governments.

VD Rate Worries Trustees

School trustees told the Capital Regional Board Wednesday they are worried about inadequate sex education and the soaring venereal disease rate among teenagers.

But they appeared to leave regional directors nonplussed over what they were expected to do about it beyond the technical information service already provided by the region's community health services.

Dr. Mark Fisher, a member of the Greater Victoria school board, was one of the trustees on hand to discuss health services provided the schools.

Because it deals in moral values, information on sex problem areas is a touchy issue, he said. But there is a tremendous increase in pregnancies among teenage girls and VD is a growing problem.

Fisher said he believes various groups such as school boards have failed young people by not taking stronger stands on such matters as disseminating birth control information.

But he failed to generate much support among regional directors, who voted to have their community health services committee consider the subject further.

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, explained that his staff make themselves available to provide technical information on the subject but prefer to be invited to the schools by principal or teachers.

"Perhaps we can be faulted for not offering more."

Fisher said he would like to have seen the regional board offer some sort of overview on the problem. School boards, because of their nature, aren't likely to, he said.

"The facts in this folder can help you get more mileage for your motoring dollar. Ask me for a free copy."

FOR years, Shell has been saying, "Mileage is our business". Now, thousands of Canadians are making mileage their business—for economy and conservation.

Shell can help. With our products, our services and with this handy folder full of tips from the experts on how to get more for your motoring dollar. Ask for your free copy next time you fill up with Shell.

It doesn't take much of an improvement in your mileage to add up to real savings. If you're like many Shell customers you use about 700 gallons of gasoline every year. If we can help you get just one more mile per gallon, that's a 700 mile bonus. A bonus for economy. A bonus for conservation.

Our folder tells you ways you can improve your mileage—and ways your Shell dealer can help. There's an easy-to-follow guide to those parts of your car which are most likely to affect mileage—so you'll know exactly which items to have checked for maximum economy and performance.

There's no better time than right now—to start making mileage your business. Your Shell dealer can help. After all, mileage is his business, too.

See him before you head out on the highway this weekend and ask for your free copy of our mileage folder.

Remember, when you drive for good mileage you do more than save money. You help conserve Canada's energy too.

There is nothing fancy or spectacular about our South declarer's play of today's deal. But it does serve as a good example of what top-notch play is all about. North-South vulnerable. South deals.

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

West's opening heart lead was won by East's ace, South's king falling. The return of a heart was ruffed by South. Declarer now paused to take inventory.

If the adversely held trumps were divided 2-2, then the fulfillment of the contract would present no difficulty: after gathering in the defenders' trumps, declarer would simply give away a third club lead, and ruff his fourth club with dummy's remaining trump. But if the trump were divided 3-1, and declarer drew trumps—including all of dummy's trumps—then the success of the contract would depend on the six outstanding clubs being divided 3-3.

Declarer's worry was that the four missing trumps might be divided 3-1, and that the six adversely held clubs were divided 4-2. So his problem was how to take his contract in these latter circumstances. He found the winning solution.

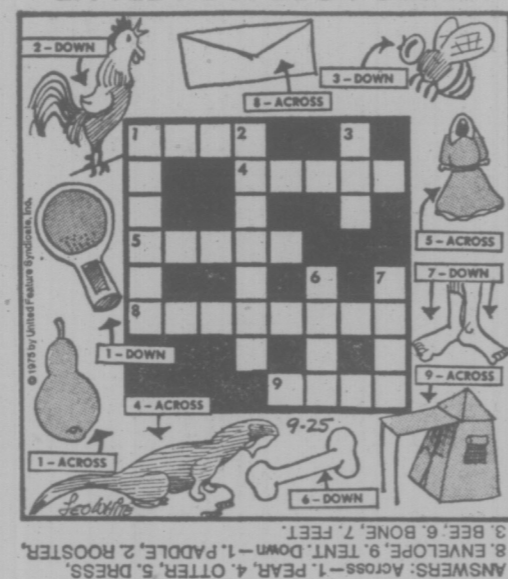

After ruffing the second heart lead, declarer cashed the ace of trumps. He then led the deuce of clubs, and when West followed with the six, dummy's three was played. East took the trick with the nine and returned the eight of trumps to South's king.

Next came a club to dummy's king, after which a club was led to South's ace. West discarding a heart. Declarer's fourth club was then ruffed with dummy's remaining trump. From here in declarer's only loser was a diamond trick.

Had declarer drawn two rounds of trumps at tricks three and four, he would have gone down, for East, upon winning the third club lead, would have led his last trump, removing dummy's last trump. And eventually East would have won a second club trick.

Of course declarer was fortunate in finding East, the possessor of four clubs, with three trumps (instead of West having the three trumps). Nevertheless, his line of play was not only the winning one, but also the correct one.

LITTLE PEOPLE'S PUZZLE

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR Astrological Forecast for Saturday, Sept. 27

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Activity accelerates; short journeys are on agenda, along with calls, messages and complaints from relatives. Be prepared for change of scenery, variety, relationships which "grow."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Adjustment at home is essential. If you ignore needs of family member, you are inviting trouble and it will accept invitation. Accent is on purchase, collections, payments, the location of lost objects. Another Taurus — and a Libra — could be involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Steer clear of electricity, machinery, unless ready to exercise caution. Tendency now is to rush, to sacrifice quality for speed. Key is to refine techniques, to insist on quality, to take cash and let credit go for another time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): One you "look up to" could be engaged in behind-scenes activity. You can expect call or message which leads to promotion or added responsibility. Capricorn person offers to share experiences, be receptive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Aggressive friend does have your best interests at heart. Know it and forgive an indiscretion. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Avoid mixing money with whispers of sweet nothings. Making extravagant promise could come back to haunt you. Act accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New chance comes your way — different approach can elevate standing. Leo, Aquarius figure in picture. Outline goal. Submit format, plan to professional superior. You might meet someone who "sweeps you off your feet."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be pulled in two directions simultaneously. Key is to rise above petty annoyances. A long-distance communication helps put puzzle pieces in place. Partner or mate receives news concerning relative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relationships are intensified. Money, investments, tax questions, insurance policies are involved. Highlight versatility. Don't feel that there is only one way or method. Expand horizons. Contact made at party proves valuable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Senseless arguments should be avoided. Applies especially in relation to partner or mate. Have facts at hand. Present them in way that impresses not infuriates. Aquarius/Scorpio individuals figure in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Problem of long standing "gets moving." You will be more mobile. You also will be happier. A burden is lifted. Gemini and Virgo persons could figure prominently. One who shares interests gives you employment hint.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Affair of heart is featured. You could fall "madly in love." If married, you rediscover mate. If single, that may be a temporary state. Be ready for change, travel, variety and creative endeavors. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio could be in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get lowdown on property, taxes, appraisals. Residence, land could be very much in picture. One who makes claims may not be able to back them with anything more than words. Be alert enough to protect your own interests.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are fascinated with medicine, law, drama. Aries, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. In October, you have more freedom, can express yourself and will be relieved of details which have been a year will bear fruit before burden. Contacts made last this year is finished.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. Hunter

"I've made another teaser with Kaloten measurements," said Joe. "There's a perfectly square box close up to the wall, and a ladder against the wall just touching one edge of the box."

Don nodded. "An old idea," he declared. "How far is the foot of the ladder from the wall, and how high up the wall is its top?"

"That's for you to get," replied Joe. "The ladder is 221 kells long, and the edges of the box under it are 60 kells."

You try!

Thanks for an idea to J. Mounie, Dublin, Eire. (Answer Monday)

SILENT ROBBER
TAKES $907

Police are looking for a young man with collar-length reddish hair who held up the Douglas and Courtney branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia Thursday afternoon and made off with $907.

The man, wearing a burgundy sports jacket and flowered multi-colored shirt, walked up to a teller shortly after 3 p.m.
and gave her a note.

The note said the man had a gun and demanded money, said police. The teller turned over $907 which the man put in his pockets before walking out.

No gun was seen, said police.

The man was last seen on Courtney heading toward Government.

He is described as white, clean-shaven, five feet seven or eight inches tall, weighing 115 pounds and about 20 years old.
His hair is combed straight and trimmed neatly.

Other bank employees didn't notice the incident until the man was gone.

The same branch was robbed of $1,484 on March 12. The thief, Kenneth George Katrensky, was caught as he walked up Broughton and sentenced to three years in jail.

China Beach Visit

PARKS AROUND US

By HUMPHREY DAVY
Times Staff

The elderly couple plodding up the footpath from China Beach, about four miles west of Jordan River, paused to talk as we were on our way to the sea.

The old gentleman clutched a sketch book like a prized possession, and after some pleasant chit-chat opened it to show drawings of trees.

He wanted to share his appreciation of the beauty all around us — stately trees with shafts of sun lighting up patches of the forest floor. And only the sound of the sea to break the silence.

"There are plenty of beaches on the island," he said. "But groves of trees like this are getting harder to find. You are in a different world here. Look at that mother tree . . . new life springing up from the old."

He pointed to a large blow-down. On the trunk small hemlocks drew nourishment from its decaying wood fibres. In time they would replace their tall brothers.

Most people who have visited the 150-acre provincial park will agree with the couple that one of its main attractions is the footpath through the canopy of trees — mostly hemlock.

The trees have helped retain the wilderness aspect of China Beach . . . that special west coast atmosphere which is attracting more people every year.

The park, which has almost a mile of waterfront, is worth visiting at least once a year, preferably in fall when there are not too many people around. It's a good place to take friends from Eastern Canada to show them a bit of west coast vegetation.

The lush vegetation — tall salal and sword ferns growing among the trees — can't fail to impress them.

There is a parking lot and water is available from the small creek.

No one is quite sure how China Beach got its name. But a geologist reported in 1912 that a number of Chinese working the Leach River for gold lived in the area. But no evidence of human habitation has been found.

TORONTO TRIES INCOME BONUS

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's working poor will receive an income supplement for a 14-month trial period beginning Nov. 1, pending approval from the province, the city's social services department announced Thursday.

The program would help persons who have steady jobs but still experience financial hardships, usually because of family size, R. L. Tomlinson, commissioner of social services, said.

It would also give incentive to heads of families who are employable but receiving city welfare, he said. The supplement would be a family's normal welfare assistance less 75 per cent of its net income.

A family of four, for example, would receive $428 on welfare. If the father worked 40 hours a week at the minimum hourly wage of $2.40, his salary, after deductions, would be $403 a month.

About $302, or 75 per cent of the net salary, would then be deducted from the total welfare assistance for an income supplement of $126, bringing the monthly income to $529, Tomlinson said.

The minimum supplement would be $20 monthly. A family with a father earning $544 a month would get this amount.

Further eligibility are that applicants must live in Metropolitan Toronto, be fully employed by an employer other than the city and have no more than $500 plus $100 in liquid assets for each dependent.

Bricklin Placed In Receivership

FREDERICTON (CP) — Bricklin Canada Ltd.'s car plants at Saint John, N.B., and Miramichi, N.B., were locked up today as the firm went into receivership under a cloud of uncertainty about its future.

Premier Richard Hatfield, who announced in a statement late Thursday that the firm was to be placed in receivership, scheduled a late afternoon news conference here to discuss the issue.

Additional financing from any of Bricklin's three secured creditors will not be forthcoming, Premier Richard Hatfield said in a statement.

He said the decision to appoint a receiver was reached in consultations with the other secured creditors — the First Pennsylvania Bank and the Bank of Montreal.

The move came less than two weeks after the government guaranteed an additional loan of up to $1.2 million, and a day after it announced it was appointing two persons to the board of General Vehicle Inc., Bricklin Canada's parent company in the United States.

Whether receivership means the end of the company — and the province's $20-million investment — is uncertain.

There was speculation the move was designed to force out Malcolm Bricklin, chairman of the board of Bricklin Canada and president of the parent firm.

Bricklin workers said Thursday they were told to report for work today as usual. As well, employees laid off in the last two weeks would report for work Monday.

A union spokesman said he hoped the situation would be cleared up in a meeting today with the receiver, the Clarkson Co.

Bricklin announced it was locating in Saint John in June, 1973. Initially, the government's investment was to be $6.5-million and it was to own 51 per cent of the shares. Bricklin was to produce about 10,000 cars in the first 12 months of operation, to begin that September.

Government investment now has reached approximately $20 million and it owns 67 per cent of Bricklin Canada Ltd., but the company has not produced the 10,000 cars.

Macdonald Tipped for Turner's Post

Times News Services
OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau was to shuffle his cabinet today, almost certainly moving Energy Minister Donald Macdonald to finance replacing John Turner, who resigned Sept. 10.

Trudeau's office confirmed that the prime minister would make an announcement at 1 p.m. Victoria time at Government House, and that a news conference would follow.

A spokesman for the prime minister's office earlier said that Trudeau had a busy day scheduled and might not be able to fit in a press conference to announce the cabinet changes.

It was indicated, however, that decisions have all been made on which ministers will move to what portfolios.

The other major move is expected to be that of Transport Minister Jean Marchand to Minister of State, without any particular responsibilities.

Marchand offered his resignation to the prime minister while in hospital three weeks ago.

Trudeau declined to accept it, but the Turner resignation re-opened the matter, and Marchand's return to hospital early this week suffering from hypertension practically confirmed he will be given less onerous duties.

Justice Minister Otto Lang and Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde are regarded as prime candidates for the transport portfolio which is one of the major ones in government, junior only to finance and external affairs.

There has been persistent speculation that Macdonald, a strong-spoken, no-nonsense Toronto lawyer, will be replaced by Trade Minister

Alastair Gillespie. And it was considered likely that Gillespie would be replaced by Regional Expansion Minister Don Jamieson, a Newfoundland whom Trudeau has described as "one of the best communicators in cabinet."

Although it had been strongly rumored in recent weeks that several other ministers, including Public Works Minister C. M. Drury and House leader Mitchell Sharp, would be leaving the cabinet, information now suggests they will remain at least until next summer.

At least one new minister is expected to be added to the cabinet in the shuffle to fill the vacancy created by Turner's departure.

Although Turner represented an Ontario constituency (Ottawa-Carleton), it is expected the new minister will be from western Canada.

Cliff McIsaac, from the Saskatchewan riding of Battleford-Kindersley, is regarded as the most likely candidate.

The Prairie provinces, with only two ministers, are under-represented in cabinet at present. In addition, McIsaac has gained experience as a minister in the Saskatchewan government of the late Premier Ross Thatcher and as a Parliamentary Secretary to Marchand since his election to the Commons last year.

Forces' Brass Gets 13% Hike

Annual average pay increases of 13.8 per cent for commissioned ranks in the armed forces were announced today by Defence Minister James Richardson, according to a defence department spokesman in Victoria.

Effective Oct. 1, the 13.8 per cent increase is for officers of the rank of colonel and below. Non-commissioned ranks were given a 14.4 per cent increase.

Hikes are comparable, he said, to those granted to groups in the Public Service Commission. Pay for the forces since 1971 has been linked to that of similar occupations in the public services.

The Victoria spokesman gave the following examples of typical salaries in the forces: a private untrained recruit from $400 a month to $450; corporal radar technician with four years experience, $1,036 a month to $1,166; warrants officer, administrative clerk, from $1,137 to $1,317 a month; and captain in logistics with six years' rank, from $1,495 to $1,715 a month.

Increases for officers of general rank in the armed

Propane Mediation Under Way

NANAIMO — Mediation efforts toward settling a dispute which has left the city without domestic gas began this morning in Vancouver following the appointment Thursday night of Peter Dowding.

The labor department mediation officer was named by deputy minister James Matkin, who is attending a departmental seminar in Trail. His action follows an urgent request by Mayor Frank Ney and city council, who also would like propane and butane supplies resumed while mediation proceeds.

Three Teamsters Union locals are in dispute with Transport Labor Relations, bargaining agent for five companies that supply liquefied gas on Vancouver Island.

Ney has emergency feeding and evacuation plans ready for elderly persons who rely on gas for heating and cooking. Some have already been accommodated elsewhere, but the mayor and council are concerned that a drop in temperatures may bring hardship to others.

Council is prepared to declare Nanaimo a disaster area if necessary to restore tanker shipments of propane and butane.

Pickets Up to Save Logs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking pulp and paper workers have agreed to lift their picket lines temporarily to allow the freeing of close to five million board feet of submerged logs which are threatened by teredos, a voracious sea worm.

The logs are resting in a booming ground at Andy's Bay near Gambier Island, 40 miles north of Vancouver.

They are in an unsorted state with many of them jammed together underwater in a condition known as "jackpot."

The British Columbia Labor

Relations Board Thursday, while upholding the legality of the picket line, urged the pulp workers to permit the logs to be freed. Otherwise, said the board, they would be subject to attack by the sea worms and a part of the province's wealth would be lost.

Ray McPhedran, president of the Canadian Paperworkers' Union Port Mellon local, said the union will lift its line today "to get the logs all floating."

He said temporary picket passes would be issued to a small crew of International Woodworkers of America members to free the logs during the next few days.

McPhedran added the pulp workers intend to supervise the operation.

"We agree with the labor board," he explained, "that the stuff does belong to the people of B.C. and it's a renewable asset all its own."

Meanwhile, talks between the International Woodworkers of America and B.C.'s forest companies continued in Victoria today.

IWA leader Jack Munro said the initial meeting Thursday was focused on the feasibility of continuing the negotiations.

"We're certainly not going to abandon the talks such as the pulp leaders did," Munro said.

BOND ISSUE

A new $50 million B.C. Hydro bond issue carrying 10 per cent interest has been approved by cabinet.

The official sale date is Oct. 15 and the 25-year issue will be available through normal investment channels.

The bonds, guaranteed by the B.C. government, will be sold in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 and $25,000.

Binding Arbitration Averts Police Strike

A threatened strike by Victoria police officers was averted late Thursday night when both sides agreed that the contract dispute be submitted to binding arbitration.

Earlier in the evening, the Victoria police union had voted 86-1 to serve 72-hour strike notice — the first strike vote in the union's history.

Union spokesman Dermot Owen-Flood said a further meeting was held after the strike vote with the union, police board and city council all agreeing to ask Labor Minister Bill King to appoint a single arbitrator.

The sequence of events leading up to the late-night agreement on arbitration began with an in-camera meeting of city council Thursday afternoon, following the regular council meeting.

Afterwards, Pollen would only tell reporters that he had been authorized to meet with the police board — the meeting would likely not be held until this morning — and then convey from the board to the union a proposal which "hopefully" would resolve the impasse.

But events apparently moved more swiftly than the mayor had indicated.

Police board member Jack Cowan, the lawyer who heads the board's negotiation committee, said today Pollen contacted him Thursday evening (before the scheduled union membership meeting) and informed him "council was prepared to go along with" arbitration.

This information was passed on to union representatives before they went into the meeting, Cowan said, but the only issue was the form that arbitration would take.

He had made known council's preference for some form of arbitration agreed by the parties and not involving an appointment by the labor minister, but this was unacceptable to the police union.

Cowan said the membership meeting apparently agreed to binding arbitration "with a strike as the alternative if we could not agree to the form that arbitration should take."

(Union president Set Patrick Braiden said after the meeting "that unless such agreement in writing was reached within 48 hours, a strike would take place.")

"But after we discussed it further we agreed on a single arbitrator," Cowan added.

Ald. Mike Young commented today that both sides in the dispute had only two alternatives, and fortunately "one of those two happened to be mutually acceptable."

Pollen had expressed his dislike of government-appointed arbitration at a police board meeting Wednesday, when he said the arbitrators are usually so biased they end up giving just about everything the union wanted, without any regard for the financial impact on the community.

He was not available for comment today.

Meanwhile, in the city's other dispute involving its firefighters, union and city spokesmen said Thursday they have learned that Labor Minister King has appointed

Death for Five

MADRID (CP) — The government today approved death sentences for five urban guerrillas and Gen. Francisco Franco commuted the sentences of six others, including two pregnant women, a government spokesman announced.

There are no credit arrangements.

The explanation for my misfortunes at the body shop is that service and the supply of spare parts lag far behind manufacture. In Moscow with more than 7 million people and the majority of Zhiguli owners, there are three repair stations. For the entire country, there are only 30 stations catering to Zhigulis.

Such scarcity evidently encourages extreme nonchalance.

MILLIONAIRE JAIL PROBLEM

TORONTO (CP) — The 10,000 prisoners in Canada's federal prisons have been instructed not to keep Olympic or provincial lottery tickets inside prison walls, the federal penitentiary service says.

A directive circulated to 27 federal prisons across the country says that prisoners holding such tickets must mail them to relatives, friends or other parties.

Gregoire Surprenant, director of the penitentiary service secretariat, said in an interview from Ottawa Thursday that the order arose from a number of security and administrative considerations.

"It's not the losers we'd be concerned about, but having an inmate win a million dollars could create a hell of a lot of problems," he said. "Who knows what effect the sudden possession of all that money would have?"

He added that prison authorities do not want the responsibility of keeping tickets on behalf of prisoners.

Saudis Demand New Oil Freeze

Times News Services

VIENNA — Saudi Arabia today demanded a freeze on oil prices until Jan. 1, provoking bitter opposition from other major producers of the world's oil.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, presented the demand to a special session of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on his return from London where he consulted his government Thursday night.

Jamshid Amouzegar of Iran, later told reporters, in reference to Saudi demand:

"No one country is going to dictate its view to 12 others."

He said, however, his country depended 10 to 20 per cent increase in two stages — half now and half at a future date.

Iran would continue to insist on a price increase of about 15 or 16 per cent, he added.

Amouzegar said nine of the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were asking for "moderate" increases although one or two OPEC members were demanding "pie-in-the-sky" boosts of 25 per cent when the current nine-month price freeze expires Sept. 30.

OPEC's present price schedule is based on a basic charge of $10.46 for a 42-gallon barrel of Saudi Arabia's Ras Tanura light crude.

There are also various surcharges or differentials for higher quality crudes and for those produced closer to their markets, and delegation sources said a revision downward of these charges was nearly complete.

Surcharges on higher quality crudes have already been reduced by a number of producers because they have been hardest hit by the reduction in demand due to the world-wide recession.

In the U.S., Congress and President Ford appear ready to hold down oil prices for another 30 days while seeking agreement on long-term energy policy.

The Senate is voting today on whether to extend through Nov. 15 the oil price controls that expired Sept. 1.

'Skipper' King Dead at 84

Freeman "Skipper" King, the veteran self-taught naturalist who has guided thousands of children in local nature rambles, died today at 84, after a lengthy illness.

King, retired from his job as Goldstream provincial park naturalist in April this year.

He was admitted to hospital Aug. 1 and underwent surgery later that month. He died today at his home at 843 Craigflower.

Hard to Top Hassle of Moscow Fender-Bender

By PETER OSNOS

MOSCOW (UPI) — An automobile accident is unpleasant anywhere, but it would be hard to top the hassle of a Moscow fender-bender as I discovered recently when my little Russian-made Zhiguli (modelled after the Italian Fiat 124) slid into a bread truck at an intersection.

The police on the scene were polite enough and a single trip to headquarters produced the "spravka," a piece of paper necessary to get the car fixed and paid for by the special insurance agency maintained for foreigners.

The trouble centred on Station Number One, the body shop — as slovenly a facility as any that was ever set a motorist's teeth grinding.

After a three-week wait to get in — I was later told it could have been twice as long — repairs that could have been made in a few days took nearly two months. All four hubcaps were stolen and other perfectly good parts were replaced by inferior versions (an orange turn signal that blinked, for instance, with a white one that did not).

When the vehicle was finally retrieved, a new door

would not shut, pieces did not fit together, finishing was shoddy and the bill, compiled on a wooden abacus, included more than $150 worth of "repairs" that adjusters said were unnecessary.

A special 40 per cent tax on foreigners was also added on.

Full payment was demanded on the spot. After some heated discussion, the insurance officials agreed to pay about two-thirds of the overcharge — but not for the stolen parts. Only thefts on the street are covered, they explained.

plaints of others, my experience could have been worse. A motorist complained in the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta a few months ago that at another Moscow garage, mechanics substituted old torn seats for his new ones and installed a steering wheel that came from a truck.

To get his car back, even in that condition, he had to pay a hefty bill.

After years of concentrating on heavy industry, the Soviet Union has only recently turned its ear to the manufacture of private cars. Production has tripled in the past five years, but there are still only 3 million such vehicles for a population of 250 million people and production runs about 10 per cent of the U.S. figure.

Every year in the next five-year plan, the total is to increase another third, mostly because the Zhiguli plant built by the Italians will reach its full capacity. This trim little sedan (there is a small station wagon also) is the Model T of Russia — with a Cadillac price. The standard model 2102 costs 5,360 rubles ($7,000 at the official exchange rate).

I'd Be an Activist Too: Barrett

VANCOUVER (CP) — If he were a Black or Chicano, living in the United States he would be a social activist, Premier Barrett told a meeting of executives from both sides of the border Thursday.

"If you don't give people social justice," he said, "they will take it themselves. You (businessmen) have made your bucks. Now it's time to give something back to your community."

Barrett arrived at the Pacific Area Conference of the Young Presidents' Organization here in time to hear an FBI undercover agent give a talk on future kidnapping plots by revolutionary groups and see a karate expert give a demonstration on self-defence procedures.

At the beginning of his speech, Barrett went right to the attacks: "Here you are, a happy, upper-middle-class in North America. What the hell kind of world are we living in? What have we been doing to ourselves in North America?" The premier said he could not believe what he had heard.

He said he had spent eight "beautiful years" living in the U.S. but "never in my wildest dreams when I went back to the U.S. did I think I would go back to a country of paranoia, violence and greed. For God's sake, what are you doing?"

Barrett attended Seattle University in Washington beginning in 1953 then St. Louis University where he obtained his masters in 1956. He also served as a probation officer for the St. Louis, Mo., country juvenile court.

He said Canadians are "scared stiff" about trends in U.S. society "because if you go down, we go down too."

He warned that unless basic services were provided for people they would rise up and get rid of the white, middle-class.

"All the training in judo

and so on isn't going to save you," he said. "You have to start sharing down at the other end if you are going to save yourselves."

Barrett said the U.S. would not be in its present condition if its leaders had built it in the way advocated by president Franklin Roosevelt.

And he said that modern-day Americans do not realize that George Washington was the Che Guevara of his time in fighting the oppression of King George III.

20% Drink Drive

CALGARY (CP) — More than five per cent of drivers on the road in Canada after 10 p.m. may be legally impaired, a report by the federal ministry of transport indicates.

The report showed 20.4 per cent of 9,744 night-time drivers tested had been drinking prior to driving.

The highest proportion of impaired drivers — 10.4 per cent of those stopped — were found on the road between 1 and 3 a.m. on Friday, with the highest number in B.C. and the lowest number in the Maritimes.

Drinking after driving was found to be most prevalent among males, middle-aged, unemployed, separated and divorced drivers. The lowest number was found among housewives, students and retired people.

Ports Open To Soviets

Times News Services

OTTAWA — External affairs Minister Allan MacEachern said today the fisheries dispute with the Soviet Union is solved and East Coast ports closed to the Soviet fishing fleet since August will be reopened Monday.

The solution to the dispute, which revolved around Canadian charges of Soviet overfishing in the northwest Atlantic, is in three parts:

— The Soviets will support Canadian efforts to achieve a 14-per-cent reduction in foreign fishing efforts off the East Coast at the Montreal meeting of the International Commission for North Atlantic Fisheries;

— The Soviet Union is to enter a bilateral agreement in the future covering fishing in an extended 200-mile Canadian fishing zone;

— Another bilateral agreement is to be negotiated covering formation of a Soviet-Canada commission which would deal with future fishing problems involving the two countries.

External affairs officials said six of eight equipment damage claims against the Soviet fishing fleet had been settled and the remaining two were expected to be resolved shortly.

Canada first proposed the 40 per cent fishing reduction in north Atlantic waters at the ICAF conference in Edinburgh last June.

MacEachern said today he expected Soviet support would help carry the proposal when it is voted on at the special session underway in Montreal.

He was happy with the agreement.

Lisbon PM Establishes New Police

Times News Services

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's military regime created a new security force today in an attempt to reinforce public order and halt spreading military indiscipline.

The move raised doubts about the future of military security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho because creation of the new "intervention force" undercut his authority.

Press reports said it could be a "no confidence" gesture against Carvalho by the powerful revolutionary council.

The council acted after about 50,000 rebellious soldiers and civilians besieged a military prison near Lisbon before dawn and forced the release of two prisoners.

The order to release the men apparently came from Carvalho, because the prison was under his jurisdiction.

The action was in open defiance of calls by political and military leaders for military discipline and public order.

Politicians said the demonstration was designed to destroy the credibility of the military hierarchy and the newly formed sixth provisional government.

Carvalho recently made a controversial remark that he believed 1,000 stolen automatic rifles were in "good hands" when it was revealed they had fallen into the possession of extreme leftists.

The security chief, who has generally sided with the far left, also said he himself would distribute arms to civilians in the event of an emergency.

The intervention force is headed by Brig. Nuno Tavares de Melo Egidio, who will report directly to President Francisco de Costa Gomes.

Press reports said Egidio's political leanings were toward the moderate group of officers instrumental in the ouster of pro-Communist ex-Premier Gen. Vasco Gonçalves.

Light Urged For Death Corner

Installation of a four-way stop sign and flashing red light at a Central Saanich intersection where a Victoria woman died Sept. 11 was recommended by a coroner's jury Thursday.

The jury ruled following a two-day hearing that Sarjit Kour Mann, 43, of 401-655 Douglas, died from head injuries received in a two-car accident at Mount Newton Cross Road and central Saanich Road.

Excessive speed by the driver of the other car, Reed Gordon Pumple, 20, of 9150 Jura in North Saanich, contributed to the accident, the jury ruled.

The jury suggested a seat belt could have lessened the injuries to Mrs. Mann, who went through the passenger side window and was thrown into a ditch 28.5 feet away. Her husband, Sarwan Singh Mann, was driving.

At the time of the accident a flashing amber light was in operation at the intersection east and west along Mount Newton, with stop signs north and south on Central Saanich Road.

Pumple testified he was 60 to 80 feet from the intersection when he said the Mann vehicle pulled into the intersection. He estimated his speed at between 40 and 50 miles per hour.

40% FEWER JOBS GOING BEGGING

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of available full-time, part-time and casual jobs dropped 40 per cent from a year earlier to 72,000 during the three months ended Aug. 31, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Full-time openings were down 39 per cent to 65,819. Longer-term openings declined 45 per cent to 25,905.

For each 1,000 existing jobs, nine were vacant. This compared with a vacancy rate of 14 per 1,000 in the comparable year-earlier period.

The highest job vacancy rates were in the Prairie provinces — Saskatchewan 17 per 1,000, Alberta 14 and Manitoba 12. However, this vacancy rate is lower than a year ago for all three provinces.

Ontario had seven vacant jobs per 1,000, Quebec nine and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, each six per 1,000.

Ferries' Boss Quits

B.C. Ferries operations manager W. B. Weston is resigning for health reasons after 14 years on the job.

"It's purely for health reasons, I've been happy here," said Weston today.

Weston, 50, has worked with B.C. Ferries since it was founded in 1959 and says he plans to take a long rest when he leaves.

VGH MOVES TO COMBAT BED SQUEEZE

Night Hours for 'Day Care'

The day care unit at Victoria General Hospital — where patients come for minor operations and go home the same day — is going to be put to work at night as the squeeze for beds continues.

Dr. D. C. Carlow, assistant executive director (medical), said today that the 24-bed unit with its two operating rooms will be used for more kinds of surgery, starting next month, which will mean keeping some patients in it overnight.

Both of Victoria's general hospitals have been jammed in recent weeks and Carlow said the crowding has meant elective or not urgent surgery has again had to be cancelled in his hospital of late.

Surgeons have now agreed to expand the kinds of operation they will do in the day care or ambulatory care unit, thus getting the unit's beds into use overnight and hopefully easing the pressure on the rest of the hospital's acute care beds.

The change means that some operations which in the past kept patients in hospital three or four days will now be done with them staying just overnight.

Such a move is possible only in conjunction with home care nursing, he said. This regional service has nurses visiting and helping recuperating patients in their homes.

Among the kinds of operations which will be added to

Victoria Times

SECOND SECTION

The unit's schedule will be simple hernia repairs, some wrist and hand surgery, varicose vein stripping and some kinds of orthopedic surgery such as correcting hammer toes.

Carlow said the day care

unit is now handling about 20 operations a day and this may rise under the expanded schedule to as high as 30 a day.

Asked if the unit might be used over weekends, he said there are no plans at present

If there was sufficient need, it is possible the unit might be used Saturdays, he added.

The hospital's board was informed of expansion plans for the day care unit at its meeting Thursday night.

Carlow also told directors that equipment for the hospital's acupuncture unit has been ordered and is expected shortly.

The acupuncture clinic, first on Vancouver Island and only the second in the province, will be used to treat certain kinds of pain. Patients will be referred to it by their doctor and screened by an assessment committee.

Board members also watched a 28-minute film which included themselves — a videotape produced by hospital staff as part of an orientation program for new employees.

The film, thought to be the first of its kind for a hospital in B.C., was conceived by Mike O'Brien, director of employee relations, who explained that it can be easily edited for updating.

Diane Luscombe, personnel officer, wrote the script which describes work in various hospital departments. She edited 20 hours of filming down to the half-hour program with help from the media staff at the University of Victoria.

$115,000 Released For Centre

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

The United Way has decided to release $115,000 for the construction of an activity centre for the handicapped in Greater Victoria, Shirley Dowell, president of the United Way, said today.

"The board of directors has unanimously agreed to lift all three conditions originally placed on the release of the money," said Dowell.

The conditions, set in 1970, were that the centre be fully funded; United Way have the right to occupy 2,000 square feet in the proposed centre; and the name of the building be suitably identified with United Way.

The activity centre board, however, found these conditions unacceptable and a five-year tug-of-war for the funds began.

She said the $115,000, part of the Montford estate which was left in trust to the United Way until such time as the Community Council decided how best to use it, will be released to the activity centre immediately. The remaining $100,000, most of which is from the T. S. McPherson estate, will be released by Jan. 30, 1976.

Floyd Fairclough, president of the activity centre's board, said he is "indeed grateful" that United Way has decided to make the $100,000 grant and release the $15,000 without restrictions.

He said the centre now has $1,107,000 in capital funds and is only $333,829 away from completing the first phase of development which would provide a functional building by April, 1976.

The centre has applied to the provincial government under the Community Recreational Facilities Fund Act for these additional funds.

The centre, to be built near the Saanich municipal hall on Vernon Avenue, would integrate such services for the handicapped as paramedical, nursing home nursing, meals on wheels, physiotherapy and occupation therapy, screening and assessment of the handicapped, transportation, recreation and educational services.

SC Had Enough Already

Lawyer George Jones has dropped out of the Social Credit nomination race in Victoria because he has lost enthusiasm for doing political battle.

"I think the whole tone of politics in the province is bad," he said, adding the choice between parties isn't distinct enough.

In addition, he said, he was expected to spend too much time fighting the NDP. His supporters in the nomination bid had good intentions, "but when it came to going out and working, they said, 'George, you go out and do it.'"

Another factor is the recent statements by Premier Barrett that an election won't likely be called before next year, Jones said he thought the election would have been called earlier.

Jones said the Social campaign seems to have peaked early, but it will come back when an election is called. He said also that he would like to devote more time to his family.

Other Social nomination hopefuls are insurance executive Ian Rendle who announced his candidacy May 9.

The Victoria seats are held by former Liberal leader David Anderson and Social Newell Morrison.

New Bumper Can Pack 'Wallop'

Motorists should call in experts when trying to pry apart crashed cars with spring-loaded safety bumpers on late model cars.

And B.C. Automobile Association manager Ray Elston agrees.

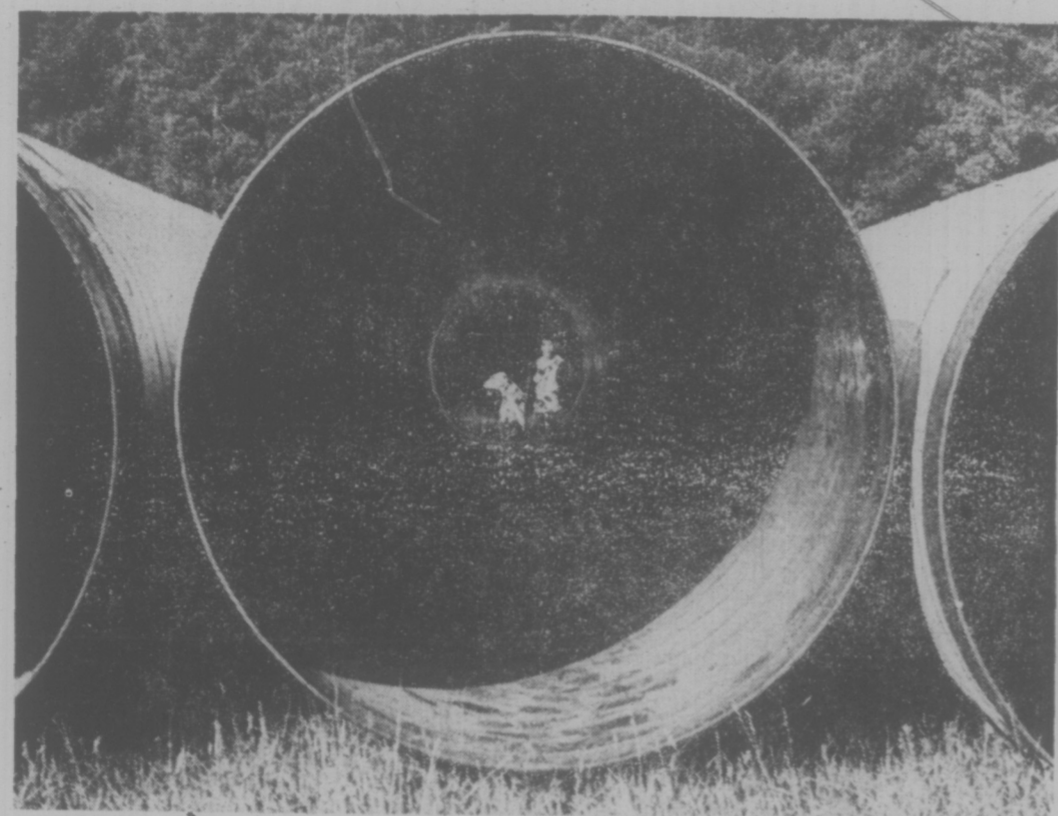

"The new bumpers have proved worthwhile in cushioning a crash at five m.p.h., but they may be dangerous in other situations," he said.

The bumpers, retract with the force of a collision, but spring out when any attempt to separate the hooked cars is made and could sever finger or legs.

"They have quite a wallop," said Elston advising that caution be used at the scene of an accident and a wrecker be called to separate the cars.

The bulletin was first issued in Phoenix, Arizona, where police were urged to use extreme care when trying to separate vehicles.

Elston said the bumpers are featured on almost all new cars.

$5,000 Damage In Fire

Careless disposal of fire-place ashes is blamed by the Saanich fire department for a fire Thursday at a house owned by the Bounty Hunters motorcycle club.

The house at 3333 Tennyson received an estimated $5,000 damage from the blaze, which firemen said started in a pile of garbage against the southeast corner of the house, probably from the fireplace ashes.

Occupants of the house left the building about an hour before the fire department was summoned, Saanich Fire Chief Harold Gains said.

Gordon Head Alarmed At High-Rise Scheme

Ask The Times

A proposed high-rise development for a scenic nine-acre site on Arbutus Road will be protested by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association.

Association president Earl M. Byrnes, 3856 Lexington, said members of the executive had expressed "concern and alarm" that the undertaking had been put before the Saanich planning department six months before the mayor and council learned of it.

The executive also will object to the principle of such a development, the first of its kind to exceed four storeys in Saanich and running against a strong expression of opinion by Gordon Head residents.

Byrnes said council will be reminded in a letter of a survey to which 600 householders responded a year ago. At the time, 78 per cent opposed this type of development in Gordon Head.

The proposal surfaced two weeks ago after having been outlined to the planning department about the beginning of the year.

Mayor Ed Lum said he learned of it July 1 and was taken by surprise at the magnitude of the proposal.

G. S. Bains, of Gordon Head Developments Ltd., wants to put 122 suites in three high-rise towers at 2283 Arbutus, the former home of R. H. B. Ker, who developed the property with extensive gardens.

It has since been advertised by Bains through a real estate firm at a listed price of $1.35 million.

On behalf of Bains, Victoria design consultants G. W. Bentham and Associates planned a layout to be known as Arbutus Cove Gardens, containing two 12-storey buildings and one nine-storey structure.

Each suite would be sold as a condominium for $100,000-$200,000 and the estate home would be modified for $750,000 to serve as an entertainment and relaxation centre for residents.

Bains said the property was offered for sale as a package including the Bentham design.

He and his associates began discussing the project with municipal planner Tom Loney in January. Loney said it was standard practice to discuss such things informally and that he cautioned Bentham not to go to great expense at that stage.

Loney said the planning department wanted to look at the site and also made it clear that the proposed undertaking was "completely out of keeping."

He also said he found it difficult to take the project seriously when the house and grounds were advertised for sale.

Lum said proposals of such a size are normally drawn to his attention either by the developer or the planner and could not explain why Loney had not done so.

On July 22, Saanich dismissed Loney without explanation.

Lum meanwhile suspended consideration of the project, but developers continued to press for an on-site meeting with planners. Lands, planning and housing committee rejected this approach, insisting that regular channels be followed.

LIVE CLOSE TO THE SEASONS and you learn that each of them, even our dark-and-damp coast winter, has its attractions. But the matchless time in a year that offers it is this golden interval between summer and true fall.

It's a time of blue skies, and sun-burnished sea married only by the vagaries of the tide. The inshore kelp beds, grown to maturity, shine in a long crescent. The big glaucous-winged gulls have returned from their island nurseries, and the trim little Pomarine will linger until the rains.

On the land and in the sea, it's a time of ripening. The salmon now foraging their way toward the rivers have made their growth and are heavy with spawn. Rafts of black scoters cruise saltlick shallows from which the varied duck population of the earlier year is departing. Just before dusk we saw a flight of Canada geese, lordly im-

The portents of winter are still no more than a hint of sterner weather to come. Along the foreshore the gumweed still grows more of yellow than brown. The chirring of crickets is woven into the sound-pattern of our lives; it will be with us until the first white frost stills it.

This is the bountiful season. If the sharp salt winds of spring blasted our two little fruit trees, we still won't go short of autumn fruit. We have apples and plums and choice yellow pears, gift of a friend whose garden flourishes in a sheltered river valley.

The little wild blackberries are gone, but any day now we'll go picking along fence-lines where tangle brambles run wild or transmuting sunshine into rich red juice.

It's a time, too, for laying against the months when this hiatus between seasons is only a memory.

These bramble berries will go into our freezer, some to be thawed for later desserts, some for jelly-making when the Certo that has vanished most woefully and mysteriously from the market shelves turns up again.

Along with her gifts, nature sends other subtle warnings. The big maple across the highway is turning bronze. Though our furnace thermostat marker has been grounded at the bottom of the scale for months, the mornings are brisk enough to make a quick blaze in our fireplace welcome.

Our woodpile isn't what it should be, and no use now to lament my failure to cut plenty of bolder when the year was younger, to season for winter fires.

Still, that's a minor lack, and one for which a drift-littered shoreline largely compensates. It's great weather for beach-proving. We bring back armloads of fir bark and hope for tides well-loaded with more of the same.

But of all these minor gleanings and harvestings, the one I like best comes when the potatoes are ready for digging.

Here I'm inclined to be over-eager.

"We'd better wait a while longer," says Win, the two of us inspecting our four short rows of Kennebecs. "Look at those tops — they're still green!"

So we waited until this morning when by judgment less hasty than mine, the spuds were pronounced ready for taking up.

Unearthing a hill of potatoes — the ones we grow, at least — is a game of chance. The big plant that should have yielded a veritable treasure-trove disappointed us. Nothing, but a couple of knobby tubers, and a handful of peewees.

Then its scrooty neighbor from which we expected even less confounded us by yielding half a dozen well-proportioned potatoes of respectable size.

Our total crop barely fills a cardboard carton. But our stony earth will winter under a layer of seaweed, and next year's take may be better.

Spring is a wonderful yeasting, a time when all is promise that may or may not be fulfilled. Summer is gone before we know it, with its vacationing visitors and its evenings that stretch out as if they would meet the sunrise rolling in.

But this sending of bright days is the sign of the year, to be enjoyed in the knowledge that it can end overnight.

At the risk of appearing ungrateful for present favours, I hope it won't. We could use a mellow October for the snuggling-up chores that must be done before the first roaring southeaster stills the cricket-song.

Tug Model Seen on Ferry

The model tugboat stolen from a display case in the Princess Mary restaurant two weeks ago is believed on the Mainland in the possession of an elderly couple.

Restaurant spokesman Gordon Schoor said today a caller positively identified the $3,000 replica in the back of a station wagon on a B.C. Ferry bound for Vancouver.

The Island Sovereign was partially-hidden under a blanket but recognizable by its brass fittings and the name plate.

Schoor said the tip was one of many received since a $100 reward was posted for information leading to the return of the model, built more than 20 years ago.

He said he hopes the publicity prompts the couple — accompanied by a couple in their 30s — to return the replica. The caller described the car as a light brown and beige older-model Meteor station wagon.

Schoor said he has followed other tips, including one caller's lead that the boat may be located in a Victoria apartment. The model concerned, however, was a fishboat.

Another caller, Schoor said, phoned late Thursday night and promised to phone again today with information on the tug's whereabouts.

Sports Series to Preview Upcoming Ali-Frazier Fight

ABC's Wide World of Sports for Saturday, Sept. 27 (5:00-6:30 p.m., Channel 4 and 8, will be an Ali-Frazier Superfight Special, devoted in its entirety to Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier as they prepare for their third ring meeting—this time for the World Heavyweight Boxing Championship held by Ali—in Manila, the Philippines, Tuesday, Sept. 30 (Oct. 1, local time).

Featured on the telecast will be exciting, exclusive home television coverage of their two earlier battles—Superfight I and Superfight II—plus exclusive television coverage of the Ali-Frazier weigh-in via satellite from Manila.

In Superfight I, March 8, 1971, at Madison Square Garden, Joe Frazier was the heavyweight champion, and Muhammad Ali had been inactive for nearly three years after his crown was taken from him as a result of his refusal to be drafted into the U.S. Armed Forces. In the months preceding the fight, Ali had started his comeback by defeating Jerry Quarry with a third round knockout in Atlanta and stopping Oscar Bonafina with a 15th round KO in New York.

Frazier had won his title the previous February (1970) in a fight with Jimmy Ellis (fifth round KO) and had defended successfully against Bob Foster in a second round KO win.

Superfight I went the distance, although a looping left by Frazier decked Ali briefly in the 15th. The bout was a close and exciting contest all the way, and it appeared the decision could have gone to either man. Frazier crowded all the way and captured an unanimous decision.

The two fighters did not meet again for nearly three years, until January 28, 1974, almost exactly one year after Frazier had lost his heavy-weight title to George Foreman by a second round KO. In the interim, Ali had racked up 41 fights, many of them exhibitions, while Frazier had had only six fights including his loss to Foreman.

In a scheduled 12 rounder at Madison Square Garden, Ali took the decision thus taking another step toward regaining his crown on Oct. 30 of last year by an eighth round knockout of George Foreman in Zaire, Africa.

Superfight II saw a determined Ali, without most of his perennial clowning, constantly moving and confusing the attacking Frazier. There was solid action in almost every round, but the victory was unanimously Ali's.

Racing Event Carried Live

Host, Fergie Oliver along with Jim Coleman and Daryl Wells will be bringing CTV viewers the excitement and action of "The Breeder's Stakes" live from Woodbine on the one and a half-mile Marshall turf, Saturday, September 27, at 1:30 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

Open to the top three-year-olds in Canada, this race is the third leg in Canada's Triple Crown of Racing. For the first time in 12 years, all three titles may be won by the same horse, L'Enjoleur. The first triple-title holder was New Providence, owned by E. P. Taylor, who won the honors in 1959. In 1963, Cane-bora took the honored spot.

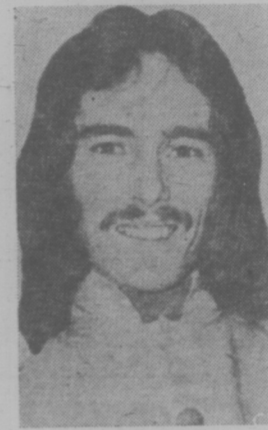

Not everyone believes L'Enjoleur will take the match however. Two entries from the West, including Pampas who is being shipped in from Vancouver, are considered very strong contenders.

L'Enjoleur, ridden by Sandy Hawley, will also be pitted against such powerful thoroughbreds as Near The High Sea, Brilliant Sandy, Mom Igi and Royal Tartar, all of whom have competed together previously.

"We are very excited about this year's Breeder's Stakes," commented Bruce Walker, Director of Publicity for the Ontario Jockey Club, "because of the possibility of a triple crown winner in L'Enjoleur."

L'Enjoleur has won close to $490,000 during his lifetime.

Today's Highlights

CBS News Special, on 7 at 6. Echoes of The Guns of Autumn, a follow-up to the documentary about hunting that generated controversy even before its recent telecast. This report is scheduled to include complaints by hunters that the original program contained scenes — like the shooting of game on commercial preserves — that are not representative of the sport as a whole. (60 mins.)

Olympic Lottery, on 8 at 6. Another draw in the 28-million-dollar giveaway with three first prizes of one million each. This sixth draw is telecast live from Winnipeg, with scheduled entertainers including The Royal Winnipeg Ballet and the singing Vos family. (60 mins.)

Cher, on 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. A show for the whole family with Cher, her daughter Chastity, Captain Kangaroo, the Hudson Brothers and magician Mark Wilson. (60 mins.)

Ryther Report, on 9 at 8:30. A documentary special on The Ryther Child Center, a residential treatment center for emotionally disturbed children. This report looks at symptoms that characterize emotional disturbances; why a child would be referred to Ryther; and explores the relationships between staff members and the children. (30 mins.)

McMillan and Wife, on 5 at 9. The McMillans (Rock Hudson and Susan Saint James) return for a fifth season with a story focusing on Mac's mother (guest star Mildred Natwick). The elder Mrs. McMillan is continually hampering the police as they search for the man who tried to murder her 90-year-old friend. (2 hrs.)

Italy: Triumphs and Tears, on 2 and 4 at 10. A documentary focusing on present-day Italy, that surveys the country's political and economic climate as well as its artistic and cultural heritage. The program, which was filmed on location in Rome, Venice, Milan, Naples and Sicily, also features interviews with director Bernardo Bertolucci (Last Tango in Paris) and author Luigi Barzini (The Italians). (60 Mins.)

Ascent of Man, on 9 at 10. Repeat telecast of the award-winning 13-part series tracing man's intellectual and scientific evolution, written and narrated by the late British scientist Jacob Bronowski. (60 mins.)

Today's Highlights

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at 12:30 and 7 at 6:30. Mike and this week's co-host Eddie Fisher welcome comedian David Brenner and singer Harry Chapin. Also on today's show is a discussion of the Joan Little case with Miss Little and her defence attorneys Jerry Paul and Karen Galloway. (90 mins.)

CHIEF DAN GEORGE
... on 9 at 8 p.m.

Classic Theatre Preview, on 9 at 7. A discussion of Christopher Marlowe's play, Edward II, the tragic 14th-century English homosexual king who was deposed and murdered. (The play will be telecast on Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.) (30 mins.)

Invisible Man, on 5 and 8 at 8. Dan (David McCallum) becomes involved in counterespionage in tonight's episode of this new science fiction series about a scientist who has the power to make himself invisible. (60 mins.)

Ourstory, on 9 at 8. Debut of a series of nine historical dramas, hosted by journalist Bill Moyers, and produced as part of an educational project geared to the U.S. Bicentennial. Tonight: The Peach Gang, a re-enactment of the 1638 murder trial of three men accused of killing a Narragansett Indian. In the cast is Canada's Chief Dan George. (60 mins.)

New Wave, on 2 and 6 at 10. Windships - a look at advances in the design and construction of today's racing yachts, and their potential application to wind-powered transports. The program also includes a brief history of sailing vessels. (30 mins.)

People of Our Time, on 2 and 6 at 10:30. The Devil's Decade, an examination of the years between the 1929 stock-market crash and the start of the Second World War, with British journalist Claud Cockburn. (30 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 11:30. Guest host Dom DeLuise welcomes Sandy Duncan, Barry Newman (Petrocelli) and Don Adams as his guests. (90 mins.)

Movies

Trunk to Cairo (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A contrived 1956 espionage story about agents from Israel and Egypt vying for a German scientist's secret formula, starring Audie Murphy and George Saunders.

The Matchmaker (xxx), on 11 at 1. Shirley Booth is delightful as the irrepressible Dolly Levi in this entertaining 1958 film version of the Thornton Wilder play on which Hello Dolly is based.

Barefoot in the Park (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. An excellent 1967 film rendering of the Neil Simon hit Broadway comedy about a pair of idealistic young newlyweds living in a rundown Greenwich Village flat, starring Jane Fonda and Robert Redford.

Cops and Robbers (xxx), on 9 at 9. A cleverly plotted, amusing 1973 comedy featuring excellent performances by Cliff Gorman and Joe Bologna as two cops who decide to pull one big robbery and retire to the exotic locales of their dreams. The robbery becomes a tense comedy of errors, and you will find yourself rooting for the cops-turned-crooks.

ROBERT REDFORD
... on 5 at 3:30 p.m.

SHIRLEY MACLAINE
... on 7 at 12:30 a.m.

For Love or Money (xx), on 11 at 9. Kirk Douglas, Mitzi Gaynor and Gig Young star in this lightweight 1953 farce about a wealthy widow (Thelma Ritter) trying to find husbands for her three daughters.

In Name Only (xx), on 12 at 10. Some familiar TV faces (Eve Arden, Ruth Buzzi, Bill Daily, Christopher Connelly and Elinor Donahue) highlight this 1969 comedy about three couples who discover they were married by a bogus minister.

Mutiny on the Bounty (xxxx), on 4 at 11. An Oscar for Best Picture went to this superb 1935 version of the classic maritime novel about tyranny and revolt at sea, starring Charles Laughton as Captain Bligh and Clark Gable as Fletcher Christian. Recommended.

Linda (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A 1973 made-for-TV suspense drama about a calculating woman who kills her lover's wife, then sets up her own husband as the murderer. Cast includes Stella Stevens, Ed Nelson and John Saxon.

The Gelsa Boy (xx), on 2 at midnight. A 1958 comedy, with just a touch of pathos, about a third-rate magician who becomes attached to a small orphan boy while on a USO tour of Japan, starring Jerry Lewis and Suzanne Pleshette.

A Black Vell for Lisa, on 6 at midnight. No rating available on this 1968 Italian-made crime-drama about an undercover narcotics agent trying to break a West German drug ring, starring John Mills, Robert Hoffman and Luciana Paluzzi.

Born Wild, on 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1968 drama about racial tension among Mexican-American students in a U.S. border-town school, starring Patty McCormack and Tom Nardini.

Gambit (xxx), on 7 at 12:30. Plot twists dominate this clever 1955 spy spoof about a daring robbery caper in Hong Kong, starring Shirley MacLaine and Michael Caine.

CHARLES LAUGHTON
... on 4 at 11 p.m.

Ten Tall Men (xx), on 6 at 1:50 a.m. Burt Lancaster and Gilbert Roland star in this 1951 tongue-in-cheek adventure about Foreign Legionnaires and their escapades in love and war.

Buffalo Bill (xxx), on 8 at 2 a.m. A big budget 1944 western adventure about the life and times of William F. Cody, starring Joel McCrea, Linda Darnell, Maureen O'Hara, Edgar Buchanan and Anthony Quinn.

Spirited Lady Hosts AM Show

Judy, CBC Radio's new AM network morning show makes its debut Monday, September 29 at 9:13 a.m.

With a three-hour mixture of serious topics and entertaining conversation, host Judy LaMarsh puts her special stamp on interesting people and places across the face of Canada, and internationally, with her zestful, down-to-earth personality.

Always outspoken, as Parliament Hill, and Vancouver hotline radio in particular can verify, Ms. LaMarsh brings to the first ever living-room set in a CBC Radio studio a tremendous variety of interesting guests and absorbing subjects. With a specially constructed set built to reflect the homey familiarity of a living room, the atmosphere of Judy throughout will be one of intimacy and warmth. Warm-hearted and often sentimental herself, she will be constantly underlining the focus of the new series with each interview, namely—People matter.

Whether in Islington, Indivik or Istanbul, the individual's the thing on Judy, and men, women and children will be talking freely about their lifestyles, their hopes, dreams, fears, relationships — and their survival. In the pressurized mid-1970s self-discovery through involvement can be therapeutic, and a daily dose of Judy with real people, in now situations, is good medicine.

Here's just a sample of good listening coming up: profiles of women across the globe with influence and power, from Gandhi and Peron to Thatcher and Meir; stories by Canadian survivors of airline crashes, ship-sinkings, freak accidents and worse; rafting down the Kootenay river with trappers and old-timers; powerful new writers and poets, and a fresh look at some familiar literary figures and their work; organizers of early Canadian trade unions — their story of struggle; and 'much, much more, including some satire, some science, some music, some gossip, LaMarsh all morning will be some show.

Whether it features a Polish wedding, a country fair, or a small town centennial, chatting indoors amidst the teacups or roughing it just below the tree line, Judy will be a radical departure from anything CBC Radio has done before.

Also, with a direct telephone line to the heart of the matter, and the people involved, the show has ample time to really develop its themes and unhurriedly get the human story from the inside. 'Ordinary' Canadians from a wide range of backgrounds and locales will bring revealing insight to how they cope with their problems, families and friends in their societies. In Halifax and Hudson Bay alike, with the unique format of the show allowing scope for engrossing topics to really come alive.

For all the range and variety of the program however, it's the dynamic personality of Ms. LaMarsh herself, with her energy and compassion, quick intelligence and humor, that will be the major catalyst and thrust of Judy. Canadians are certainly familiar with her long-established image: brilliant criminal lawyer, author, sometimes abrasive critic, bold federal cabinet minister. This new show, because of its depth, outreach and scope, will add dimensions to her already multifaceted personality, and, too, enlighten listeners across Canada about things Canadian — and themselves, they perhaps never before suspected.

Response to Judy should prove to be an education in itself.

In-School Programs Return to PBS

Channel 9 has begun its 21st season of broadcasting programs for in-school use. Fifteen thousand guidebooks have been distributed to member school districts in Washington and British Columbia, as KCTS-9 goes forward with its plans to air 45 in-school, primary to intermediate level, series.

For 20 years, the Seattle Public Schools, and school districts throughout two-thirds of Washington State and British Columbia have supported the in-school programming, and related utilization services. Three hundred thousand boys and girls in grades K through 12 have received these services.

Of the 16 new series being offered, eight began this month. They include:

—About Safety, a primary level of safety instruction (Fridays at 11:30 a.m., 2:55 p.m.)

—Caroline's Corner, all new stories for the intermediate level student (Mondays at 2:15 p.m., Tuesdays at 10:45 a.m.)

—Cover To Cover, a new series of popular book reviews (Mondays at 1:45 p.m., Thursdays at 2:15 p.m.)

—Zebra Wings, a language arts program to teach creative expression (Tuesdays at 2:15 p.m.)

—Environments in the State of Washington follows a grandmother and her two grandchildren on excursions throughout the state (Mondays at 10:45 a.m., Wednesdays at 2:15 p.m.)

Today's Highlights

Celebrity Cooks, on 2 and 6 at 3:30. Host Bruno Gerussi welcomes Canadian actress Kate Reid who prepares her favorite stew and dumpling recipe. (30 mins.)

STELLA STEVENS
... on 5 at 9 p.m.

Happy Days, on 2, 4 and 6 at 8. In this conclusion of a two-part story, Fonzie (Henry Winkler) makes his record-breaking motorcycle jump and lands in the hospital. (30 mins.)

Rivals of Sherlock Holmes, on 9 at 8:30. Donald Pleasance guest stars in tonight's episode about a murderous horse who has a habit of killing each daughter of a wealthy household on the eve of her wedding. (60 mins.)

Fifth Estate, on 2 and 6 at 9. Co-hosts Adrienne Clarkson and Warner Troyer's topics tonight include a profile of a former Saigon government official who has immigrated to Canada; and an examination of Canada's immigration laws regarding political officials. (60 mins.)

Police Story, on 5 at 9. Stella Stevens guest stars in tonight's episode about a policewoman faced with the dilemma of marriage vs. career. She has been offered a permanent position as an undercover narcotics officer — a job which she wants, but is resented by her policeman husband. (60 mins.)

Switch, on 12 at 9. Tonight's story finds Fete and Mac (Robert Wagner and Eddie Albert) deeply in debt as they decide to personally finance an operation against a family of con artists who use seances to cheat victims in a stock-market con. An excellent guest cast includes Ida Lupino and Joan Collins. (60 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 11:30. Carson is back in the host's chair tonight, and among his guests is the noted author-surgeon William Nolen. (90 mins.)

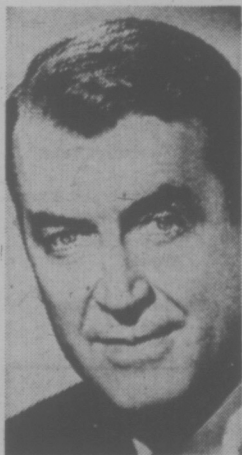

Movies

The Girl Who Knew Too Much (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A low-budget 1969 crime-drama about an adventurer who helps the CIA in their search for the Communist assassin of a syndicate boss. Adam West and Nancy Kwan star.

Elephant Walk (xx), on 11 at 1. Elizabeth Taylor, Peter Finch and Dana Andrews star in this 1954 romantic drama about a young English bride who comes to her new husband's tea plantation in Ceylon and finds the adjustment to a new life difficult. It's all very predictable, but Miss Taylor looks ravishing and the elephant stampede at the end is great.

Flap (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A 1970 mixture of comedy and bitter social comment about a free-spirited American Indian trying to draw attention to the plight of his impoverished tribe — with tragic results. Anthony Quinn stars.

Brother Orchid (xxxx), on 12 at 7. A great cast (Edward G. Robinson, Ann Southern, Humphrey Bogart and Donald Crisp) highlights this delightfully amusing 1940 comedy about a gangster who takes refuge in a monastery and learns a new lesson or two about life.

CARROLL O'CONNOR
... on 12 at 11:30 p.m.

Anatomy of a Murder (xxxxx), on 7 at 8:30. A superbly acted 1959 film version of the best-selling novel about a Michigan lawyer who defends an army officer on a murder charge after the man's wife has been attacked. The dialogue is explicit, with the cast (James Stewart, Lee Remick and Ben Gazzara) expertly handled by director Otto Preminger. Recommended, but not for the whole family.

Madame X (xx), on 11 at 9. Lana Turner stars in this updated (1966) version of the ancient tear-jerker about a fallen woman who commits murder to protect her son and husband from scandal.

Nightmare for a Nightingale, on 4 at 11:30. No rating available on this recently-made-for-television mystery-drama about an opera singer blackmailed by her husband who was thought dead. Cast is unfamiliar.

Marlowe (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. James Garner and Carroll O'Connor are excellent in this 1970 mystery based on novelist Raymond Chandler's legendary detective. Garner in the title role is fine, but O'Connor (pre-Archie Bunker) is a standout as a cop always two steps behind Marlowe.

Crazy Desire (xxx), on 2 at midnight. A charming 1964 Italian-made comedy-drama about a middle-aged man momentarily trying to recapture his youth, with a group of free-living teenagers. The cast (Ugo Tognazzi and Catherine Spaak) is dubbed into English.

Angel, Angel, Down We Go, on 6 at midnight. No rating available on this bizarre 1969 psychedelic tale starring Jordan Christopher as a pop star involved with both a middle-aged matron and her ugly-duckling daughter.

Two Gentlemen Sharing, on 8 at midnight. A 1969 British-made drama which examines black-white relations on the fringe of London society, starring Robin Phillips and Judy Geeson.

Moment to Moment (xx), on 7 at 12:30. Jean Seberg, Honor Blackman and Sean Garrison star in this 1966 suspense drama about a young wife who accidentally shoots her lover, then frantically tries to hide the body — which disappears.

Johnny Allegro (xx), on 6 at 2:05. A predictable 1949 crime-drama, starring George Raft in his usual role of an ex-gangster helping the FBI track down enemy agents.

RELAX—It's all for laughs as Humphrey Bogart, Edward G. Robinson and Paul Guilfoyle star in the 1940 gangster spoof, Brother Orchid, to be shown on Tuesday at 7 p.m. on Channel 12. The story revolves around a crime boss who is reformed by religion and a great supporting cast includes Donald Crisp, Ann Southern, Ralph Bellamy and Cecil Kellaway.

PBS Detective Series To Continue Through October

The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes, the one hour drama series based on Sir Hugh Greene's anthology of Victorian and Edwardian detective stories, continues its adventures in the month of October on KCTS-9.

Starting off the month is The Affair of the Tortoise, produced by Robert Love and directed by Bill Bain. The death of a pet tortoise and the discovery of a voodoo doll in a London lodging house form part of an alleged murder in Victorian London. When Private Investigator Martin Hewitt (Peter Barkworth) goes to the house to tell Hester Chapman (Cyd Hayman) of her good luck in inheriting a fortune, he encounters the quiet odd-job man Monsieur Goujon (Timothy Bateson) and his heckler Cesar Rameau (Johnny Sekka). While Hewitt is present, Rameau kills Goujon's turtle. Rameau is later found dead, but his body disappears before the police's arrival. "The Affair of the Tortoise" will be seen October 7 at 8:30 p.m. and October 11 at 8:00 p.m.

The following week, the Fergus Hume story The Mystery of the Amber Beads is featured. Rich Mrs. Arryford is found murdered, and Detective Sergeant Grubber (Joss Ackland) is confident that he has discovered the killer. Hagar the Gypsy (Sara Kestelman) however, who has plenty of her own problems — trusts her own intuition and feelings more than the so-called "facts" of the case.

On October 21 at 8:30 p.m. and October 25 at 8:00 p.m.

John Thaw stars as Lieutenant Holst in The Sensible Action of Lieutenant Holst. A quiet, unambitious but stubborn member of the Copenhagen Police Force, Holst gets involved in an international situation. His orders are countermanded by his superiors, and as a result, a tragic death occurs. The drama poses the question whether Holst, left to his own devices and instincts, could have saved the man's life.

An R. Austin Freeman story closes out the October Rivals (October 28 at 8:30 p.m., November 1 at 8:00 p.m.).

The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes is a production of Eastern Educational Television, made available to KCTS-9 by the Thames Television, made

BLUES HISTORY HAS TOP NAMES

Jazz virtuoso Dizzy Gillespie (great-grandson of a slave who was born the daughter of an African chief) traces the development of the blues from its beginnings and shows its influence on his own art in a two-hour blues special on The Entertainers, Sunday, Sept. 28, at 7:03 p.m. (AM). The show will also be heard on CBC Radio's FM network, Sat., Sept. 27, at 8:03 p.m.

The program, prepared by Lilly Barnes and Greg Gallagher, avoids any chronological or academic approach. Without neglecting either tradition or innovation, the program weaves a more personal and improvisatory fabric in order to enhance the spirit of the Blues.

In addition to Gillespie, other blues artists featured are Muddy Waters, John Mayall, Willie Dixon and Koko Taylor, who talk of their personal experiences with the blues onstage and off. Ralph Gleason, columnist for Rolling Stone and a record producer, talks of the impact of the blues on North American culture.

Presenting their inimitable brand of music are Bessie Smith, "Ma" Rainey, down-home folk Blind Lemon Jefferson and Sonny Boy Williamson, as well as contemporary minstrels such as B.B. King and Taj Mahal.

John Mayall's comment, "I think the blues are as alive and raunchy as they've ever been" is amply illustrated on this CBC Radio show for Sept. 28th. Producer for The Entertainers is Ann Hunter.

Today's Highlights

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at 12:30 and 7 at 6:30. Mike and this week's co-host Eddie Fisher welcomes among today's guests actress Dorothy Lamour and Oscar-winning composer Marvin Hamlisch. (90 mins.)

... on 7 at 6:30 p.m.

Merv Griffin Show, on 4 at 4. What's it like being a secretary to a celebrity? Find out on today's show as host Merv Griffin welcomes the secretaries to Marion Brando, Julie Andrews, Mary Tyler Moore and Steve Lawrence and his wife Eydie Gorme. (90 mins.)

Book Beat, on 9 at 7:30. Host Bob Cronin talks with journalist and author John Nance, who describes the three years he spent with Stone Age people living in a Philippine rain forest. Nance's book is entitled, The Gentle Tassaday. (30 mins.)

Documentary Special, on 9 at 8. Life and the Structure of Hemoglobin — a study of the pigment in red blood corpuscles that carries oxygen from the lungs to the body tissues, and carbon dioxide from the tissues back to the lungs. (30 mins.)

Music Special, on 9 at 8:30. Play It Again, Uncle Sam — a special tracing America's musical heritage, from 1776 to the present. Music and songs are presented by Bob Hope, Tommy Smothers, Henry Mancini, songwriter Sammy Cahn and blues artist Taj Mahal. (60 mins.)

Nobel Prize Laureates, on 2 at 10. A profile of Sir F. Macfarlane Burnet, Australian virologist and physician, who shared the 1960 Nobel prize for medicine and physiology for his study of the body's reactions to the transplantation of foreign living tissues. (30 mins.)

Say Brother, on 9 at 10. Debut of a new PBS series dealing with black affairs. Tonight: a profile of the Nation of Islam, better known as the Black Muslims. (30 mins.)

Johnny Carson, on 5 at 11:30. Carson celebrates his 13th anniversary as host of The Tonight Show with a special two-hour program, which includes many special guests and film clips of memorable moments from past shows. (2 hrs.)

Movies

Fireball 500 (x), on 8 at 12:45. A lightweight 1966 drama about teen-age stock car racers involved in the search for a murderous Southern moonshiner, starring Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello.

The Mating Season (xxx), on 11 at 1. Comedy actress Thelma Ritter shines in this amusing 1951 film about a plain-spoken mother of a man who poses as a servant without letting on her relationship to her socially conscious daughter-in-law. Gene Tierney and John Lund co-star.

A Ticklish Affair (xx), on 5 at 3:30. A weak script hampers a good cast (Gig Young, Shirley Jones and Red Buttons) in this 1963 comedy about a romance between a Navy officer and an attractive widow with three children.

Fear on Trial (xxxx), on 8 at 9. George C. Scott is brilliant in this excellent 1975 dramatization based on the true life incident of one man's battle against a blacklist. The story is based on the successful 1956 lawsuit by popular radio and television personality John Henry Faulk against AWARE, Inc., for falsely labeling him pro-Communist thus ruining his broadcasting career. This film dramatizes Faulk's six-year fight — its personal toll and its culmination in the courtroom. Recommended.

The Greatest Show on Earth (xxxx), on 11 at 8. Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular circus melodrama, which won the Best Picture Oscar in 1952, and stars James Stewart, Charlton Heston, Betty Hutton, Cornel Wilde and Dorothy Lamour. Entertainment plus.

The Girl Most Likely to ... (xxx), on 4 at 11:30. Comedienne Joan Rivers wrote the script for this offbeat but fascinating 1973 black-comedy about the trials of an unmercifully ugly college girl trying to attract men — and what happens to those men when she is made beautiful by plastic surgery after a car accident. Hollywood hopeful Stockard Channing is excellent in the title role and her makeup personnel deserve special praise.

History Is Made at Night (xxx), on 2 at midnight. A curious 1937 mixture of comedy and melodrama about the eternal triangle of wife, husband and another man, starring Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur and Leo Carrillo. The story has some bright moments, including a finely staged shipwreck sequence.

Dayton's Devils (xx), on 6 at midnight. Routine 1968 crime-drama about a plot to steal a two million dollar payroll from an Air Force base, starring Rory Calhoun and Leslie Nielsen.

Journey to Shiloh (xx), on 8 at midnight. A cast of young Hollywood hopefuls (circa 1963), including Michael Sarrazin and James Caan, are featured in this western yarn set during the Civil War.

The Cobra, on 7 at 12:30. No rating available on this 1968 Italian-made adventure about U.S. government agents trying to track down opium sources in the Middle East, starring Dana Andrews and Anita Ekberg.

Maryland (xx), on 8 at 2:10 a.m. A sentimental 1940 tale about family conflict and horse breeding, starring Walter Brennan, John Payne and Fay Bainter.

Safari (xx), on 6 at 2:15 a.m. Victor Mature plays the brave white hunter heading a jungle safari which meets with the savage tribes of the Mau Mau, in this action-filled 1956 adventure.

U.S. Actress Acclaimed in Newest BBC-TV Import

By DAVID FINCH

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Lee Remick looks nothing like Sir Winston Churchill. But that did not stop her winning Britain's valiant of an Emmy for portrayal of the vivacious, young-born girl who became mother of Winston Churchill.

Miss Remick's highly-sensitized title role in 'Jennie: The Story of Winston Churchill's Mother' will be seen on Oct. 8 when the BBC Broadcasting Service (Channel 9) holds the American premiere of its latest TV import, to be seen in weekly parts.

Although Miss Remick is an experienced actress, this is the first time she has played a historical role or a real person. At a preview of the series called 'The Experience of a Lifetime'.

She said she had wanted to play the part of Jennie since she was a child. Her wish was true early last year when she was chosen by producer James Cellan-Jones to play the role. Cellan-Jones directed episodes in the highly acclaimed 'Forsythe' series.

As Sir Winston's widow, she recently, her mother-in-law did not look a bit like Lee Remick. True, both have blue eyes, but Jennie was small, dark and well-rounded while Lee is slim and blonde.

LEE REMICK has been widely praised for her performance in 'Jennie', the new seven-part BBC drama about Winston Churchill's American mother, Jennie Jerome. The series will have its North American TV premiere on Oct. 8 at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.

Both were American and acquired British husbands, but their life styles were vastly different.

"There is no similarity between us in terms of social life, nine-tenths of which I loathe," Miss Remick said. "I never give parties; I am not the magical hostess Jennie was. With her it was one party after another. She would go out to dinner, come home at about 10 p.m., then change and go out to a ball until three in the morning. That is the kind of social life I couldn't have stood. I'm much more private than Jennie."

But despite the personal differences, British critics agreed that Miss Remick captured Jennie's character when the series was shown in Britain last October on Commercial Television.

The series features Jennie's life from her arrival in England at the age of 19 to her death in 1921 at the age of 67. It covers her marriage to Lord Randolph Churchill, younger son of the Duke of Marlborough; her widowhood and second marriage, to George Cornwallis-West; their divorce and her third marriage, to Montague Porch.

JOHNNY CARSON celebrates his thirteenth anniversary as host of The Tonight Show, in a two-hour special on Wednesday at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

MONROE MUSICAL TRIBUTE ENCORED

Hey Marilyn!, Cliff Jones' musical based on the life, loves and death of the late Hollywood sexpot Marilyn Monroe, will have an encore performance on CBC Radio, Wed. Oct. 1 at 8:03 p.m. The musical, which was premiered last February, is being repeated as part of World Music Week on International Music Day.

A sampling of press comment indicates the kind of enthusiastic reception given Hey Marilyn!.

"The tragedy of Marilyn Monroe ... has never been more poignant than in the new musical by a Canadian composer whose name will one day be a household word — Cliff Jones." Halifax Chronicle-Herald.

"Jones has skilfully captured the essence of the kinds of music which marked the Monroe years ... an inventive and captivating couple of hours of musical drama." Ottawa Citizen.

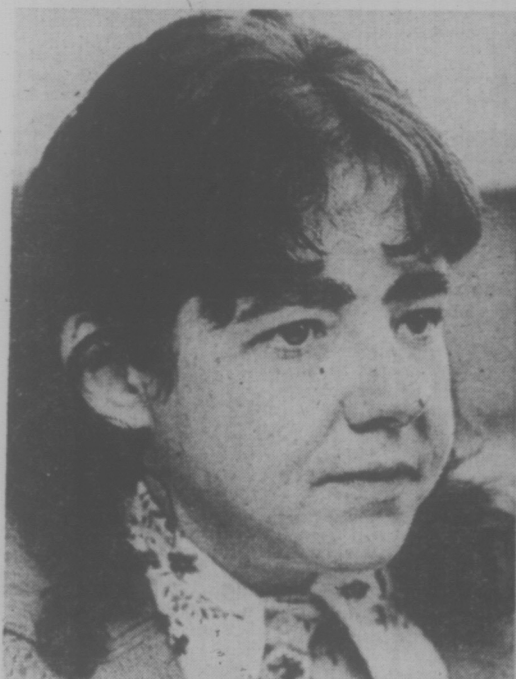

"Mr. Jones has a genius for accurately recreating once popular musical styles ... Cliff Jones is the brightest popular musical hope in Canada today." Winnipeg Free Press.

"Jones seems to spurt music like a tap ... Hey Marilyn! has 37 musical numbers ... most of them are bright and bouncy in various contemporary styles and all of them are musically competent." Toronto Globe and Mail.

Beverly D'Angelo made her radio debut as Marilyn. Others in the cast are Cal and Rory Dodd, Peter and Barbara Law, Rudy Webb, David George, Cathy Young, Jeanette Klopfch and Scott Fisher.

Toronto-born Cliff Jones wrote nearly 40 pieces of individual music for what he describes as "a musical biography" with virtually no dialogue. Arranging and conducting for the string section is by Milan Kymlicka; for the brass, Ben McPeck; and Cliff for the rhythm section. Choral director is Laurie Bower.

Today's Highlights

Ascent of Man, on 9 at Part 2 of the award-winning series, written and narrated by the late British scientist Jacob Bronowski traces man's change from nomad village agriculturalist. (60 mins.)

Carol Burnett Show, on 8 and 6 at 8. In a rare guest appearance, actress Shirl MacLaine joins Carol and her regulars, Tim Conway, Harvey Korman and Vic Lawrence. (60 mins.)

Romantic Rebellion, on 9 at 8. As examples of fear and frustration in Romantic art host Kenneth Clark profiles the life and works of Gian Battista Piranesi (1730-1778) and Henry Fuseli (1741-1825). (30 mins.)

Classic Theatre Preview, on 9 at 8:30. A discussion of Christopher Marlowe's drama, Edward II, the tragic 14th-century English homosexual king who was deposed and murdered. (30 mins.)

Classic Theatre, on 9 at 8. Edward II, by Christopher Marlowe, an Elizabethan drama about a misfit king, as portrayed by Ian McKellen in this 1969 BBC production. McKellen plays the king, who ruled England from 1307 to 1327, as a petulant, childlike man whose eventual suffering at the hands of his foes and his arrogant lover, transform him into a sympathetic tragic figure. (2 hrs.)

Maclean, on 8 at 9:30. Host broadcaster Michael Maclean reports on sex education in Canada. Using schools in London, Ontario, the program surveys approaches used in sex-education classes and includes comments from students, parents and teachers. (30 mins.)

Some of My Best Friends are Men, on 2 at 10:30. Hostess Maxine Samuels talks with Beverly Manley, wife of Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica. Topics include the women's movement in that country. (30 mins.)

Mannix on 4 at 11:30 and Longstreet at 12:30. Repeats of these two popular crime dramas, starring Mike Connors and James Franciscus, pre-empting the late night movie. (2 hrs.)

Johnny Carson, on 5 at 11:30. Outspoken journalist and broadcaster William F. Buckley Jr. is among Johnny's guests tonight. (30 mins.)

Movies

Tiger by the Tail (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A 1968 mystery about a returning war veteran searching for his brother's killer, starring Christopher George, Tippi Hedren and Dean Jagger.

The Mountain (xx), on 11 at 1. Spencer Tracy is wasted in this predictable 1956 drama about two mountain climbing brothers trying to reach a plane that has crashed in the Swiss Alps. Robert Wagner also stars.

The Last Hunt (xxx), on 5 at 8:30. An interesting 1956 western drama about the last of the big buffalo hunters in the Dakotas during the 1880s, well directed by Richard Brooks, and starring Robert Taylor, Stewart Granger and Debra Paget.

Fear on Trial (xxxx), on 7 at 9 p.m. George C. Scott is brilliant in this 1975 dramatization of a true life incident about one man's battle against a blacklist. The story is based on a successful 1956 lawsuit by John Henry Faulk, tery about a private detective investigating the murder of a tycoon's mistress, starring Harry Guardino, Dean Jagger and Barbara McNair.

Valdez is Coming, on 12 at 9:30. No rating available on this 1971 western starring Burt Lancaster as a Mexican-American peace officer tracking a cattle baron who sanctioned the death of an innocent murder suspect.

A Bullet for Pretty Boy (x), on 12 at 11:30. A 1970 beach-blanket biography of gangster Pretty Boy Floyd, as portrayed by former teen-age idol Fabian, who plays the criminal as if he was just a nice guy who found himself in an unfortunate situation. It's ludicrous and completely inaccurate.

The Rainmaker (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. Burt Lancaster and Katharine Hepburn shine in this entertaining 1956 drama about a rural con man who brings a little sunshine — and lots of rain — into the life of an unhappy spinster and her family.

Texas Across the River (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1966 western spoof starring Dean Martin as a gunrunner, Alain Delon as a rodeo man with romantic problems, and Joey Bishop as Martin's wisecracking Indian sidekick.

M.M.M. 83 (x), on 8 at 12:30. A tiresome 1964 Italian-made, English-dubbed spy thriller about a secret agent investigating the murder of a professor who has invented a revolutionary new engine.

Fireball 500 (x), on 7 at 12:30. Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello star in this silly 1966 drama about a group of teen-age stock car racers who become involved in the hunt for a murderous Southern moonshiner.

All the King's Men (xxxx), on 8 at 1:45 a.m. An Oscar for Best Picture of 1949 was awarded to this memorable and powerfully-acted drama about the rise and fall of a Southern politician, starring Broderick Crawford (Best Actor Oscar), Mercedes McCambridge (Supporting Actress Oscar), John Ireland, Joanne Dru and John Derek. Great late night viewing.

Autumn Leaves (xx), on 6 at 2:05 a.m. Joan Crawford and Cliff Robertson star in this emotion-wringing 1956 drama about a lonely middle-aged woman who marries a much younger man, but soon discovers he is on the verge of a mental breakdown.

Networks Battle for NFL Ratings

WILLIAM BARRY FURLONG

VASHINGTON (WP) — a battlefield is small, com-t, frenetic. It blows with a rescent brightness. It has a h sense of clamor, less n explosive, more than rely nerve-shattering. It inves not lives but dollars — is of millions of dollars. It the Battle that is bigger n football. It's the Battle of otball-on-TV.

The combatants are CBS and C. The logistics of their
uggle are impressive:
ere the NFL deploys 1,032
n (Note: 24 teams of 43 n in 12 games) to play the me of football on Sunday
ternoons, the two TV netrks deploy 700 persons — t to mention 72 cameras, 24
w-motion machines, 60 tape achines, and a dozen wide-ns — to televise the game football on Sunday after-oons.

The tide of battle is mea-red in the ratings. Last ar, they seemed to indicate at the two communications ants would end up nearly d at battle's end.

ad more strenuously than er in 1975. (ABC, which has own ball games on Monday ghts, is not party to this isterous Sunday afternoon oodletting.)

Some signs of combat: CBS going after some NBC announcers in building and reliding its football-announg staff. Among them: Al Miraels of San Francisco, Johny Morris of Chicago and eannie Morris, Johnny's ife, who did some sports fea-ure work on the NBC station Chicago.

NBC is going after the CBS regame audience by developing grandstand. NBC sports ven managed to bump the prestigious Meet the Press ("After seven years of arguing," says Carl Lindemann Jr., head of NBC Sports) to a new and earlier time in order to clear the 30 minutes before game time for the sports fan.

The idea was that CBS was

DON MEREDITH
... celebrity jock able to build its football-on-TV ratings because it grabbed the football-hungry fan with a pregame show while NBC did not. "They (CBS) always head the advantage of a half-hour of lead-in time," says Lindemann.

CBS is developing something of a "star" system by hiring and promoting celebrity jocks (Sonny Jurgensen, Johnny Unitas, Hank Stram)
as a way of trying to attract viewers through the celebrity of the jock announcer rather than the significance of the game.

NBC is intensifying its conviction that the game is the thing, not the announcer. "I don't think," says NBC's Lin-demann, "that the fans tune in a football game to hear the announcers." NBC's view is cemented in the belief that it has the better teams and hence the better games. It handles the AFC — including Oakland, Miami, Pittsburgh, and the New York Jets and Joe Namath. That division has a reputation for high-riding, long-passing very explosive football. CBS has, on the other hand, the less glamorous old NFL teams.

CBS is seeking to broaden its appeal beyond the most fervid football fan by bringing in four women to be "feature talkers" during the various telecasts.

Musser feels from CBS' surveys that the "mix is different", in today's football audience — more women, more children." He says that the dedicated and clinical fan who wants to watch a particular football game, will always be there: "If we put it on in purple at 4 o'clock in the morning, he'd be up and watching it."

"Most people turn ... to a specific game. I'll get my share of that, because the league is relatively balanced," he says. "But I want to go after the less committed. I want to go after the individual who doesn't care if he watches Pittsburgh-Buffalo or Chicago-Detroit." And one of the ways he's doing it is by playing down the football expertise and playing up the diverse personalities of the staff — including the women.

NBC is still working hard on bringing football expertise to the most fervid of football fans. It has quietly hired an assistant coach, who will analyze the particular teams

NBC is telecasting on a particular day. He will use his expertise to anticipate what action and players will be important on the next play, so the director can tip his cameramen and deliver the shot that will respond to the needs of the knowledgeable fan.

NBC has an "eavesdrop-per" — a transmitter that certain officials will wear on their belts during the game. It will allow NBC's viewers to eavesdrop on what the officials and players are saying about the options on penalties.
(Yes, it has a cutoff so the viewer can't hear the moaning and cursing of the ballplayers).

The real thrust of Sunday afternoon competition this year is based on the three P's — Programming, Personalities and Preparation.

The programming belongs to NBC and its new show, Grandstand. It opens Sept. 21 with Jack Buck as the anchor man. Grandstand will continue after the football season ends, when its prime target will be ABC and its Superstars and Wide World of Sports.

The personality belongs to CBS. As a ratings gimmick, it embraces both men and women.

The women: Last year, CBS and Wussler experimented with Jane Chastain in the broadcast booth. The enthusiasm for Jane Chastain was restrained — to put it kindly — and CBS hustled her out to a role as a feature talker.
Wussler also hired former Miss America Phyllis George and Jeanne Morris, and he hired actress Maureen Arthur to be feature talker from the West Coast.

The men: Television has always, hired out-of-work jocks as a sort of welfare role for the mindless. Now the demands are going up. Some ex-jocks devoted themselves to learning the TV business and became authentic and skilled broadcasters — Pat Summerall of CBS is one; Johnny Morris is a conier. Nevertheless, some ex-jocks take the Sunday network jobs simply

JOE NAMATH
... gladiator personality

as part-time labor — i.e., Alex Hawkins (CBS) and Willie Davis (NBC) and Al Dero-gatis (NBC) and Tom Brookshier (CBS).

The tendency now is to hire the celebrity jocks. NBC hired Don Meredith less to be a sportscaster than to make him into a Big and Immortal Actor; that may take a while.

CBS hires and earnestly promotes the celebrity jocks to attract fans. To build ratings. Not to broadcast games, except incidentally. "A former player gives us 'marquee' value," says Wussler.
"Not all the ex-jocks make it in broadcasting," admits Wussler. "If you go back over the last 10 years, I suppose the batting average is 20 per cent, 30 per cent," he says.

Certainly Unitas is there on CBS, for the same reason Jurgensen is there: because he will attract a certain group of fans who know his name and thus might build the CBS ratings.

The preparation, of course,
belongs to both networks.
Each handles six telecasts a weekend with 21 to 40 people at least five cameras in each telecasting crew — and the only differences between them are somewhat esoteric.

If NBC does anything different, it is in its dogged pursuit of the meaning of football as a game, not as a celebrity event.

Every week, NBC sports executive producer Allan B.
Connal and each of his crews studied what contests might develop within the game that will make the game more exciting — and enlightening — to viewers. It might be a clash between a rookie offensive lineman and a veteran defensive end. It might be a
York Jets' linemen are doing in blocking for Joe Namath when he drops back to pass.
Or it might simply be a within-the-game feature on the different personalities and philosophies of the coaches as they try to wrench victory from the game at hand.

Whatever the decision, Con-nal gets tape cassettes from every game NBC televises on Sunday afternoon and begins reviewing and criticizing them Monday morning in order to prepare better for the next weekend.

Will any, or all, of this make any difference?

To some people, yes. They will choose one network over another. That network will win the Great Battle of Ratings this year. And next year, the other network will — brainlessly, witlessly, mindlessly — follow its example.
So choose carefully what you want this year — for fear that next year, that's all you're going to get.

CLASSIC THEATRE—Ian McKellen stars as the young homosexual king and James Laurenson as his lover in Christopher Marlowe's play, Edward II, on Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.

Maclear Reports On Sex Education

Almost everything in society teaches the young to be sexually attractive, yet seldom are they taught to be sexually responsible, correspondent Michael Maclear reports in the next episode of Maclear titled The Sex I.Q., telecasting Thursday, October
2, 9:30-10:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

In this program, Maclear takes a look at London, Ontario, a community that tries and which, despite its conservative reputation, has perhaps the best sex education program in Canada. But even here, he finds the sex educational results abysmal. Teenage VD, promiscuity and ille-gitimacy serve as a nationwide example for dismay.

London, a cross-section of traditions, attitudes and income levels, has just completed its first comprehensive survey of student sex knowledge and behaviour and the main street profile of these teenagers is between the pathetic and the ridiculous.

Teachers such as Jan Tomalak and Jim Wait want to do more for their students but are limited by what grades they are allowed to teach.
Each has expressed concern over students in lower grades asking them for advice when they need answers, not a couple of grades later.

The students feel the subject matter is presented too casually and too late. They want instruction to begin much earlier. During a filmed conversation with some students, Maclear finds they also want clear moral guidelines on relationships based on their own individual needs.

One of the conclusions is that learning the facts of life isn't enough. These facts have to be translated as behaviour.

INGRID BERGMAN

... on 5 at 3:30 p.m.

WOODY ALLEN

... on 4 at 9 p.m.

Sleeper (xxxx), on 4 at 9. Television premiere of Woody Allen riotous 1973 comedy, which takes a nutty but inspired look into the future. After undergoing an operation, Woody is frozen and awakens in 2173 to find himself in a police state, where the government has perfected its torture techniques to the point where hapless victims are forced to watch reruns of Howard Cosell on TV. There are marvelous sight-gags and an unending flow of one-liners, most of them hilarious.

The Victors (xxx), on 12 at 9. A sprawling episodic 1963 saga focusing on individual members of a squad of American soldiers as they trek through Europe during the Second World War. A huge cast includes George Peppard, Eli Wallach, Melina Mercouri and Jeanne Moreau.

Assignment Terror, on 6 at midnight. No rating available on this 1970 European-made science-fiction tale about aliens who use the reincarnated bodies of two scientists to help in their planned invasion of earth.

Spirits of the Dead (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An all-star cast (Jane Fonda, Brigitte Bardot, Peter Fonda and Alain Delon) highlight this stylish 1968 trio of Edgar Allan Poe stories, directed by Federico Fellini, Roger Vadim and Louis Malle.

A Hole in the Head (xxx), on 12 at 12:30. Frank Sinatra, Eleanor Parker and Edward G. Robinson star in this 1959 comedy about a good-time Charlie who comes to the end of his financial rope and has to re-evaluate his place in life. Well directed by Frank Capra and featuring an excellent supporting cast.

The Crimson Cult, on 7 at 12:30. Horror star Boris Karloff played his last role in this 1968 English-made tale of witchcraft and revenge in modern-day Britain.

Beau James (xxx), on 2 at 1 a.m. Bob Hope is better than usual in this entertaining 1957 story based on the life and career of James J. Walker, New York City's colorful mayor during the Prohibition era.

MELINA MERCOURI

... on 12 at 9 p.m.

Attack of the Mayan Mummy (x), on 6 at 1:50 a.m. A 1963 Mexican-made thriller about reincarnation.

Night of the Blood Beast (x), on 7 at 2 a.m. A 1958 low-budget tale about alien cells that take control of an astronaut's body.

Destination Moon (xx), on 8 at 2:25 a.m. A dated (1950) but clever story about man's first trip to the moon.

CBC AM-FM Radio Highlights

SATURDAY

12:10 (AM) Our Native Land — Tar Sands Dilemma. The power crisis of 1974 made the development of the Athabasca tar sands an economic necessity. In one short year, Fort McMurray has become an economic centre. What are the effects on the native townspeople? A character profile of the community.

1:30 (AM) Hot Air — Maxine Sullivan and the John Kirby Sextet revisit their hits of the middle '30s. Host: Bob Smith.

8:03 (FM) The Entertainers — Host: Jim Bauer. A blues special prepared by Lily Barnes and Greg Gallagher, with music from Bessie Smith to Taj Mahal. A look at the personalities who sing and live the blues in the U.S. and in Europe. Interviews with Muddy Waters, John Mayall, Dizzy Gillespie, Koko Taylor and Ralph Gleason (Rolling Stone columnist). Authentic blues is still very much around, says John Mayall, "I think the blues are as alive and raunchy as they've ever been."

8:03 (AM) CBC Stage — The Reminiscences of Ludlow Bushmat, written by Ludlow Bushmat, concerns his adventures in the bush. With James Hurdle, Michael Hogan. Directed by Clarke Rogers and produced by Claudia Gibson in Winnipeg.

10:00 (AM) Anthology — The Cleft of Light, a long poem by Barry Callaghan, read by the author. It was recently published in the literary magazine, Exile.

11:03 (FM) Great Canadian Gold Rush — Rock music series with host Terry David Mulligan. Tonight: Studio sessions with singer-songwriter Richard Armies of Toronto, and the Shakey Al Band from Montreal.

SUNDAY

10:00 (FM) Benjamin Britten: Biography in Conversation and Music — Host: John Grenfell. Today: The final program in the series will be devoted to Song Cycles and Folk Songs by Britten. A special interview will feature Peter Pears, British tenor, and Britten's associate for many years. Other guests: John Warrack, music critic for the London Daily Telegraph; Donald Mitchell, head of Faber music, and longtime friend of Britten; Hans Keller, music critic and longtime supporter of Britten's music. Script written by Kenneth Winters.

12:05 (FM) BBC Concert — A program commemorating Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovich, who died last month at the age of 85. Part I — From the 10th Edinburgh Festival — Philharmonia Orchestra, conducted by Gennady Rozhdestvensky. Suite from Katerina Ismailova (Lady MacBeth of Mtsensk), and Symphony No. 12 in D minor (both by Shostakovich). Part II — From the 72nd Season of Henry Wood Promenade Concerts — Natalie Shakhovskaya, cello; Vitaly Gromadsky, bass; BBC Choral Society; Moscow Radio Orchestra, conducted by Gennady Rozhdestvensky. The Execution of Stepan Razin,

1:03 (AM) The Bush and the Saloon — The Eagle in Darkness describes the two visits to Canada of Benedict Arnold, based on documents and letters. In 1775 Col. Arnold led a detachment of the army of the united colonies into Canada to capture the citadel of Quebec. He was given the Indian name, Dark Eagle. Twelve years later, he and his family settled in Saint John. The role of this patriot and traitor, soldier and family man is played by John Horton, with Joan Gregson as Peggy, his wife. Produced in Halifax by John Douglas.

5:30 (FM) Touch the Earth — Sylvia Tyson hosts this series of contemporary folk music. Today: A feature on Sunland Slim; songs of the Irish Rebellion; and a humorous song workshop from the 1974 Winnipeg Folk Festival.

7:03 (FM) Opera Theatre — Host: Don McGill. Thais (Massenet) (Anna Moffo, Gabriel Bacquier, Jose Carreras, Justino Diaz, et al., New Philharmonia Orchestra and Ambrosian Opera Chorus conducted by Julius Rudel).

7:03 (AM) The Entertainers — A blues special prepared by Lily Barnes and Greg Gallagher, with music from Bessie Smith to Taj Mahal. A look at the personalities who sing and live the blues in the U.S. and in Europe. Interviews with Muddy Waters, John Mayall, Dizzy Gillespie, Koko Taylor, Ralph Gleason (Rolling Stone columnist). Authentic blues is still very much around, says John Mayall, "I think the blues are as alive and raunchy as they've ever been."

9:03 (AM) CBC Vancouver Chamber Orchestra — Return of Series. The orchestra is again conducted by John Avison: Choric Dance (Creston); Divertimento No. 11 in D, K.251 (Mozart); Concerto for Chamber Orchestra (Lees).

10:30 (AM) CBC Playhouse — A Marriage Has Been Arranged, by Alfred Suro, a comedy about a woman who traps a man into marriage, directed by Peter Donkin.

3:30 (AM) The Max Ferguson Show — The inimitable Max Ferguson returns for a new season of satire and all-round fun, with his sidekick Alan McFee.

8:03 (FM) Ideas — Divisions — The End to Divisions: Sums up the common problems created by divisions and the resolutions to all divisions. Some, including Laine, N. O. Brown, and Paolo Freire (whose Pedagogy of the Oppressed redefines the meaning of education), believe that change can only come about by a transformation of consciousness first and of institutions later. Others, including Fanon, Mao, and Che Guevara, believe that change must come first in the institutions before man can become liberated. This program ends with a discussion of Peter Weiss' Marat-Sade which dramatizes this argument.

8:03 (AM) Music of Our People — A concert by folk-

9:00 (FM) CBC Monday Evening — Requiem, Opus 89 (Dvorak). Alec Robertson introduces a performance of one of the Czech composer's great works. (Maria Stader, soprano; Siegfried Wagner, contralto; Ernst Haefliger, tenor; Kim Borg, bass; The Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Karel Ancerl).

10:30 (AM) Great Canadian Gold Rush — A live concert recorded in a Vancouver club featuring Ken Tobias, during his western tour last spring. Also, an interview with Tiran Porter of The Doobie Brothers.

TUESDAY

10:10 (FM) Interview Special — Bert Nelson talks to Professor Herbert Gush — Physicist at UBC — about the "Big Bang Theory". Professor Gush is building an instrument to look 16 billion years into the past. The instrument will be carried in Black Bart V rocket which will be launched from the Churchill research range in February of next year. In part one he explains how this big bang possibly happened. (Part II of this interview will be heard next week).

8:03 (FM) Ideas — Cancer: The 20th Century Plague — Tonight: The Last Resort — When conventional medicine fails the cancer patient seeks comfort and cure in unorthodox ways: out-and-out Quackery, products like laetrile, drugs still in the investigative stage as hydrazine sulphate, nature cure, even faith healing, and other methods that concentrate on the psychosomatic influence and assertion of will. A report from the periphery of research.

8:03 (AM) CBC Tuesday Night — Part I — The Mind Within the Brain, considers the medical, legal and ethical questions of psychosurgery. Written, narrated and produced by Barbara Amiel. Interviewed are: Senator Edward Kennedy of the U.S., who held a Senate subcommittee hearing on the subject; Dr. Jose Delgado, the world's finest brain technician, for 25 years at Yale University when he was forced to leave and return to Spain; Dr. Elliott Valenstein, University of Michigan, author of Brain Control; Dr. Kenneth Livingston, world-famous neurosurgeon at Wellesley Hospital, Toronto; and others. They discuss the pros and cons and whether it's possible to change a person's behavior by manipulating his brain. Part II — CBC Winnipeg Singers, conducted by William Baerg; Kyrie and Gloria from Missa Brevis (Buxtehude); Three Motets from a collection of nine English Motets for the Church Year: Come Ye and Let us Go Up, The People Walked in Darkness, and O Lord Almighty God (Bernard Naylor); Three Motets: Also hat Gott die Welt geliebt, Die mit Tränen saen, and Das ist der Gewisslich wahr (Heinrich Schutz).
